MENZALA UNLUCKY AT SANDOWN.

SIX LENGTHS' BEATING IN £1,000 SPRINT.

J. JARVIS HAS A BLANK DAY.

The manœuvre conceived some years ago by Jack Jarvis and Harry Wragg of taking a wide sweep on the bend into the straight at Sandown Park in order to secure firm going, has now been countered, writes "Hotspur," the "Daily Telegraph" racing correspondent. The Executive have had erected a temporary set of rails which have narrowed the straight to a width of about 17 yards, and the turf is now evenly watered.

Jack Jarvis, who has found Sandown Park a happy hunting-ground in the past, drew a blank yesterday, but he was very unlucky not to win the Wellington Handicap with Menzala. Sir Laurence Phillips' filly was left about six lengths, yet managed to finish a good third to Golden Fleece.

Golden Fleece possessed a slender winning chance on form, for he was last in the field behind Thamar at Chester on his only previous outing this year. His one success as a juvenile was at Worcester in November, when he won a maiden plate at the expense of Mickie Bulger. Yesterday he took the lead from Miraculous soon after half-way, and did not have much difficulty in holding off Zoltan.

AGINCOURT'S NECK FAILURE.

Agincourt, another runner from J. Jarvis's stable, was narrowly beaten in the Sandringham Foal Plate. Agincourt, who was conceding weight all round, failed by only a neck to bring about the downfall of the favourite, Buckwood.

There was also plenty of support for Saaf, who had some useful juvenile form, but had not been out this season. The Aga Khan's colt ran well, and should have benefited from the race.

The running was made by Peace Time, with Calibre and Scaraben most prominent of the others, and Peter Porcupine last. Peace Time was still in front of Scaraben entering the straight, but both were beaten a couple of furlongs from home when Buckwood took the lead.

Mr. Hornung's colt was at once challenged by Agincourt, but in a great finish the favourite held on to win by a neck.

Lowrey, successful earlier on Gela filly, rode a fine race on Buckwood, who had shown himself in form when running Cave Man to a neck at Ascot last week.

WINNER FOR SIRETT.

Asterion, who has been disappointing in the past, proved good enough to beat some better fancied candidates in the Claremont Handicap. In an open market Tom Cringle eventually started favourite at 11 to 2, with seven of the other 10 runners all backed.

Tom Cringle was always nicely placed behind the pacemaker, Tapageur, and below the distance looked the probable winner. However, Sirett, on Asterion, found an opening in the last couple of hundred yards, and catching the favourite close home drew away to score by a length, with Snipe Wood third.

Sirett has been unlucky this season, and he was delighted to get off the 13 winners mark.

The bookmakers were not in a very generous mood when betting opened on the Rookery Maiden Plate. There were 29 starters, and they offered 5 to 4 against Evermine. As Mrs. Rank's filly won I suppose they will consider themselves justified, but it did not seem a fair price to me.

Carslake had her well away, and at halfway was leading from Macaroon—in Mr. Rank's colours—Golden Thyme and Blot. Macaroon was the first to be beaten, but Blot stuck to the favourite so well that Evermine had only half a length to spare passing the post. Foreground, who was third, paid odds of nearly 70 to 1 on the tote for a place.

EGYPTIAN QUEEN'S VICTORY.

Vanvitelli, who belongs to the Earl of Harewood, a steward of the meeting, made the running for a long way in the Wadham Selling Plate, and was followed into the straight by the favourite, Egyptian Queen. He was beaten well below the distance, where Egyptian Queen drew out and resisted the challenge of Caffyns by a length.

Blenkinsop came on the scene late to keep Vanvitelli out of third place, but Sweet Apple Joe was never dangerous. Kate Cosmo also ran a disappointing race, and does not seem to be so good as she was. Egyptian Queen, who was bought in for 260 guineas, should win again in this company.

On her only previous appearance Gela filly had shown promise behind Sweet Ceylonese at Windsor. She was not so well backed as Wyllie for the Hampton Selling Plate, but gained an easy victory. These two were in front from the start, but whereas Gela filly galloped on resolutely in the last furlong, Wyllie dropped back and was beaten out of a place.

He was passed first by P.A. and by Margaret Catchpole, who had a good race for second place, P.A. getting the better of the struggle by a neck. Gela filly, however, was never in danger from the distance, having a couple of lengths to spare passing the post. She was sold to Stanley Wootton for 520 guineas.

THE UNLICENSED MONEYLENDER.

CASE OF BELFAST WOMAN.

£100 FINE, MITIGATED TO £25.

A fine of £100, mitigated to £25, or in default a month's imprisonment, was imposed on Mrs. Elizabeth Beggs, 37 Fairview Street, at the Belfast Summons Court, before Mr. W. F. M'Coy, R.M., for trading as a moneylender without a licence.

Four women gave evidence that defendant lent them money, on which she charged a rate of 6s in the £.

Dr. Mills, Crown solicitor, prosecuting on behalf of the Ministry of Finance, said that if the women borrowed £1 they had to repay 26s at the rate of 1s 3d per week.

Mr. M'Coy said he took a serious view of the case. Persons must be fully licensed before trading as moneylenders. The defendant as an agent had facilities to lend money.

"MEANS LAW AND ORDER."

JUDGE HANNA AND A NAME.

During the hearing of a case at Omagh Quarter Sessions before Judge Hanna, Mr. R. H. O'Connor, solicitor, asked a witness if it was a fact that he was a great man for law, and was known as the local lawyer. The witness said that was not so.

Mr. O'Connor—Is is not a fact that you are such a great lawyer that you are known as Sir Dawson Bates? (Laughter.)

His Honour—Oh, well, that would mean that he stands for law and order. (Laughter.)

DEATH OF MR. H. GORDON.

The death of Mr. H. Gordon, an ex-stationmaster of the G.N.R., occurred rather suddenly in Bundoran on Thursday evening.

Since his retirement from the service of the Great Northern Railway Company, which he had served as an inspector and before retirement as stationmaster at Annaghmore, County Tyrone.

The late Mr. Gordon took an active interest in the welfare of Bundoran. He was chairman of the Development Association, and led the way in carrying out many of the useful works that Association has to its credit.

CHILD DIES OF SLOW POISONING.

YEW TREE'S BRANCH.

CO. DERRY INQUEST REVELATION.

An inquest was held at Carrowmena in the Myroe district of Co. Londonderry on Friday by Dr. A. G. Martin, J.P. (Coroner), regarding the death on Monday of Annie, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. M'Daid, of Carrowmena. Head-Constable Huey represented the Crown.

The child had been in her usual good health on Sunday when she attended Sunday school twice and spent most of the day at her grandmother's. Next morning she was found unwell, and death occurred in the afternoon before the arrival of Dr. J. Acheson.

Dr. Acheson, Limavady, said he had carried out a post-mortem examination, and while the cause of death was consistent with non-irritant poisoning he could not define it. He had some of the organs sent to Dr. J. A. L. Johnston, Derry, for pathological examination.

Dr. Johnston said the child's organs were healthy. There was no sign of disease and no trace of any medicinal alkaloids. In his opinion death was due to some slow-acting vegetable poison.

Sergeant O'Reilly replying to the Coroner, said there were yew trees near the home of the child's grandmother and he had found a broken branch.

A verdict of accidental death due to vegetable poisoning was returned.

LIVERPOOL PROVISIONS.—Fowls 8d to 8½d, chickens 11½d to 1s, small spring chickens unquoted.

BIRKENHEAD CATTLE.—With the removal of restrictions on Irish live stock, trading conditions have improved, and more country buyers were in evidence this week. The supply on offer consisted of well-finished bullocks and heifers, with a fair number of cows and a few bulls. Trade was slow and recent prices were not maintained. Choice small bullocks and heifers made 8½d to exceptionally 8½d, best heavy descriptions around 7½d, with other sorts proportionately lower; young cows and bulls 6d, aged sorts 4d to 4½d. Lambs continued a slow trade at around 9d—all prices per lb. sinking offal. The week's supplies were 774 Irish cattle and 6,124 lambs.

CLEVELAND IRON.—Conditions still greatly restrict business, but an undertone of hopefulness is noticeable. Supply of pig iron is superabundant. Customers extensively covered and transactions few and small. Cleveland qualities almost unsaleable, users still having heavy stocks of foundry iron, largely of Continental makes. Accumulations of East Coast hematite both at consumers' works and at makers' yards inconveniently heavy. Producers of semi-finished iron and steel, while perturbed by a sharp shrinkage of demand for all commodities, incline to the belief that the present disquieting situation will not be of long duration. Release of Government orders that will benefit Teesside industries expected. Iron and steel scrap very plentiful and difficult to dispose of.

DUBLIN CORN.—White oats of suitable quality fairly well placed at previous values. Otherwise they show a waiting attitude with values tending easier—White oats 14s to 15s 3d, black 12s to 13s, and small lots of barley around 18s to 19s per barrel delivered.

GLASGOW CORN.—The market rates quietly steady with No. 1 Manitoba wheat now quoted at 42s 3d per 480lbs. c.i.f. Glasgow. Plate maize is about unchanged at 8s 1½d per cwt. on spot and 7s 4½d per cwt. due early July, later positions range from 6s 7½d to 6s 10½d per cwt. Grinding barley on spot is held for 7s 6d, while autumn shipments are worth 6s 9d per cwt., with other mill offals about unchanged. First grade Australian flour is nominal at 23s 6d per 280lbs. ex store plus quota.

GLASGOW IRON AND STEEL.—Scrap metals—Deliveries to local works are still restricted owing to large stocks held. Imports will probably ease off now but there is not much likelihood of any change in the position for the next month or so.

MORE DEFENCE WORK PLEA.

BIG ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED.

ASSISTANCE BOARD GRIEVANCES.

In the British House of Commons, Mr. PARKINSON (Lab., Wigan), in a debate on the Ministry of Labour and the Unemployment Assistance Board Votes, spoke of the amount of unemployment in Lancashire. Something like one-fifth of the male population was unemployed. Lancashire was not classed as a special area, although in some areas of Lancashire there was greater unemployment than in any other part of Great Britain.

In the cotton industry 125,000 people had gone out of employment in the last 12 years. Coal-mining had lost 37,000, and general engineering something like 32,000. The miner was being displaced by the mechanical process of coal-mining. There were no other industries coming into the county by which they could get other work.

Out of 400,000 insured workers in Merseyside, over one-fifth were unemployed, and the total number of unemployed for the whole region was 90,000.

He complained that the Government had done nothing to encourage the establishment of factories needed for the defence programme in the industrial areas where work was most wanted.

Referring to the proposal to establish a new aircraft factory near Birmingham, he asked "Why in the name of heaven should this factory be at Birmingham? Why not put the factory in some part of Lancashire more remote from possible air raids and in a place where there are large numbers of unemployed. I am quite certain that we should be able to find all the engineers required.

"The Minister does not know Lancashire at all and does not know Lancashire people. Put the works there and we will find the people to do the work."

CHILDREN'S ALLOWANCES.

Mr. AMERY (C., Sparbrook) said if the duty of the Unemployment Assistance Board was to provide for the immediate needs of the family, how was that duty reconcilable with a decision to reduce by over one shilling weekly allowances given for each of the children.

Parents to-day had a tremendous inducement to restrict their families and refuse to have children, except among the most improvident element, because they knew that only by doing so could they give their children a decent chance in life.

He suggested a system of graded allowances for children by the State as was the case in other countries, both outside and within, the British Empire.

Mr. HAROLD MACMILLAN (C., Stockton) said that while Mr. Amery was speaking a Labour member had mentioned sotto voce that Mr. Amery's suggestions were denied by his own Front Bench. "Any Front Bench will deny any proposition with which they don't agree," Mr. Macmillan commented, amidst laughter.

"As the Queen advised Alice, they practice believing and denying things for an hour every day and so exhibit an extraordinary degree of scepticism and cynicism." (Laughter).

MEMBERS' EXPERIENCES.

Mr. BUCHANAN (Lab., Gorbals), who stated that he himself had been unemployed, contended that the Unemployment Assistance Board was entering into the field of a Royal Commission without any of its limitations. It was both judge and jury. Every kind of cruel machine had been invented to enquire into the means of applicants. Four and a half million pounds had been spent to save less than a hundred thousand pounds.

Mr. TOMLINSON (Lab., Farnworth) said that he was one of a family of seven, and his father, working in the heyday of the Lancashire cotton trade, earned only 26s or 27s a week.

"I as the youngest of seven," he added, "had to work on Saturday afternoons helping to make carpets in order that we should be able to live."

LABOUR MINISTER'S REPLY.

Mr. ERNEST BROWN (Minister of Labour) declared that the Ministry had been increasingly winning its way in general acceptance in every part of the House and the country as a magnficent servant of the people. Since the Committee on Holidays with Pay was appointed, there had been made collective agreements between employers and employed affecting no fewer than 1,750,000 workers.

While not wishing to belittle the tragedies that were inherent in certain Lancashire towns, this was not the whole Lancashire picture. Such problems did not arise in the spinning section of the industry, where the industrial structure was entirely different to that of the weaving section. Apart from the coal industry, there was no single industry in the whole range of our industrial life which had had so much consideration by responsible Government departments than the cotton industry.

An Opposition motion to reduce the Vote was defeated by 200 to 97 and the debate was adjourned.

TRANSPORT UNION.

PORTRUSH CONFERENCE.

AGRICULTURAL WAGES BOARD.

The delegates at the All-Ireland Conference of the Transport and General Workers' Union held a private session in Portrush and discussed a long list of resolutions, several of which dealt with Northern Ireland.

A statement was issued by Mr. Ernest Bevin, general secretary, to the effect that the conference thoroughly overhauled the whole of the administration and organisation of the Irish area, and determined to expand its activities in various directions, including agriculture, commercial road transport, and general workers.

With regard to agriculture, it was decided to press for the establishment of an Agricultural Wages Board in Northern Ireland. In the textile trade the Union is to be asked to appoint a special officer with a knowledge of the trade to assist in bringing up the organisation to a higher standard.

A resolution regarding wages in the scutching and dyeing trade was considered, and it was decided to render every possible assistance to bring the present negotiations in regard to wages to a satisfactory conclusion.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

On the question of unemployment the conference viewed with alarm the figures which, in the case of Northern Ireland, amounted to 27 per cent. of the population, and the problem was becoming a real scourge.

Speakers declared that the Government of Northern Ireland was not tackling the problem with the vigour which the situation demanded, and in the case of the Government of Eire regret was expressed at the inadequacy of the old-age pensions and the means test associated with it.

A vote of thanks was passed to the chairman (Mr. H. J. Edwards), the officials from England, and the Executive Council.

35,000 TON LIMIT IN U.S.

WASHINGTON, Friday. — Admiral Leahy, chief of naval operations after a conference with President Roosevelt, to-day announced that a decision had been reached to maintain the 35,000-ton limit for battleships.

If bids for four ships on July 15 were satisfactory, actual construction would start early in 1939.

DERRY MODEL SCHOOL.

£600 IMPROVEMENT SCHEME.

An improvement scheme, estimated to cost £600, at Derry Model School, will come before the Corporation at their monthly meeting on Tuesday.

The scheme, which is sponsored by the City Surveyor, Mr. A. S. Hamilton, includes the reduction of the number of trees in the school grounds to permit the planting of ornamental shrubs and evergreens and the construction of an avenue, surfaced with flags of coloured concrete, and a low wall of rustic bricks on each side from Northland Road to the main entrance to the school. He also recommends that no blinds should be put on the windows of the school, which is a building of recent construction, as it would distract children when the wind is blowing.

PREMIER'S BOMBING SPEECH.

LORD CECIL BREAKS AS CONSEQUENCE OF IT.

"ALL HE WILL DO IS SEND NOTES."

Viscount Cecil has decided that he can no longer be ereated as "even nominally a supporter of the Government," and has asked that the Government Whip should not be sent to him.

He has taken this step as a result of Mr. Chamberlain's attitude towards the bombing of British ships by the Spanish insurgents.

Lord Cecil's decision is announced today in a letter which he sent on Friday to the Earl of Lucan, captain of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms, who acts as Chief Government Whip in the House of Lords.

In that he states:—

"It is not because I wish to take either side in the Spanish war that I feel that Mr. Chamberlain's attitude is indefensible.

"The ships bombed were acting lawfully in pursuit of their trade. They had on board only such goods as they were entitled to carry under the orders given to them by the British Government.

"The attacks made were not accidental, but deliberate, and even after the ships were holed the insurgent 'planes machine-gunned them with the object of killing or disabling the crew.

"Some 57 ships have been attacked, and several British subjects have been killed.

"It is admitted by the Prime Minister that the attacks were illegal—that, in fact, the British subjects killed were murdered. Yet the Prime Minister declines to take any action, economic or military, to protect British lives and property.

"All he will do is to send notes which have been quite ineffective, since it early became clear, and is now avowed, that they entailed no consequences for General Franco or his followers and allies.

"I do not recall any incident in British history at all comparable. I do not believe that any other British Minister has ever made speech like that of Mr. Chamberlain. It seems to me inconsistent with British honour and international morality."

Lord Lucan has replied much regretting the decision to which Lord Cecil has come, and adding—"I have shown your letter to Stanhope as Leader of the House, and he has advised me to send it to the Prime Minister in order that he may see it."

REPORTED MUTINY IN MOROCCO

OVER RETURN TO SPAIN.

SOLDIERS PURSUED AND SHOT.

TANGIER, Friday.—It is reported that trouble broke out yesterday at Ceuta when native soldiers were about to embark for Spain.

The soldiers were returning to Spain after sick leave.

There destination had been withheld from them, and when they saw Spanish soldiers coming to meet them they opened fire on them on the order of their own Moorish officer, it is stated, and a battle went on for most of the afternoon.

The mutineers were pursued to the Tangier zone, and it is believed that nearly all of them were shot.—Central News.

GERMAN ROAD BEHAVIOUR.

GOEBBELS' "TEN COMMANDMENTS."

Dr. Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda, announced on Friday night a new campaign of road accidents.

During the next few days, he said, every German would receive a pamphlet containing "ten commandments" on road behaviour. This was to be carefully studied during the coming week.

After this period had elapsed, every offender against the rules of the road, whether driver or pedestrian, would be punished. Ignorance would not be accepted as an excuse.

"May the results show," concluded Dr. Goebbels, "that in this sphere, as in many others, we Germans can offer an example to the world."

PLENARY POWERS FOR POLICE.

Wimbledon a Lesson To Dictators

Why a Princess Gave Up Bridge

HELEN WILLS MOODY
Seven times champion, "in spite of her fame she remains unspoilt"

THE Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championship is one of the London season's events to which I have always looked forward. I can truthfully say that I have had more fun and felt more thrills from watching men's doubles at tennis than watching any other game.

I do not know enough about football to follow it conscientiously, and cricket can be very dull even to lovers of it, especially when the batsman's reply to bowlers is: "Yes," "No," or "Maybe"! (to quote W. A. Oldfield, the famous Australian wicket-keeper).

Someone once described cricket as "a leisurely vigilant warfare." This is probably not true of the cricket of to-day. Nevertheless, the description remains in my mind whenever I see a match in which the opponents are playing for safety. A golf championship is a game which is wonderful to watch; but unless you seat yourself firmly on a peak above a bunker at one chosen putting-green—like the short hole at Muirfield—the crowd is too great to permit you to see anything at all of a whole round.

MY ROYAL BOX PRIVILEGE.

THE only championship to enjoy in comfort is the annual tennis played at Wimbledon. Lord d'Abernon brought George Caridia to stay with us at The Wharf when my husband was Prime Minister. He had been a great player in his day, was called the Prince of Volleyers, and was on the Wimbledon Committee. He was the most lovable of men, and did not mind playing with us on our hard court. For though we were all keen as kites, we were very imperfect performers.

It was thanks to his friendship that I received an invitation to take a friend to what is called the Royal box every year to watch the tennis championship at Wimbledon—a privilege for which I have always been grateful, as the applications for tickets for the Centre Court cause the committee infinite trouble.

I do not think that any foreign dictator could organise an annual public event with greater efficiency, courtesy, and precision than the men who are on the Wimbledon Committee. The advantage of watching tennis from the Royal box is that you do not have to turn your head backwards and forwards, because you are always facing the players, and, though the same may be said of those who sit opposite you, you have to apply for tickets many months beforehand—and this I am either too lazy or too stupid to do.

HELEN SHOULD WIN AGAIN.

IT is too early to predict who will win the championship for women, for I have not seen all the new female competitors. Were I to have a bet I would say Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, which would, perhaps, be rather hard on Mrs. Moody since my bets rarely come off. A famous Frenchman said: "Style, c'est l'homme," and the same might be said of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody.

She hits the ball in the centre of her racket in the same way as when you are talking to her she looks you in the face. She has been seven times champion, and, great player as she is, Suzanne Lenglen won only six times.

She both places and pitches the ball with the precision of a man. To use a nautical expression, her speed is of very few knots, but her cruising range is marvellous, and, though she appears to move slowly, she has such a fine eye that she is always behind her opponent's ball.

THE GREATEST PLAYER I HAVE MET

IN spite of her fame, Helen Wills Moody remains unspoilt, and she is a charming woman. I saw her some days ago, after the conclusion of the Wightman Cup match, and also her opponent, Miss Kay Stammers, whose pretty little face was still perspiring from her exertions in the match. My daughter and I were both introduced to her when she came off the court, and I congratulated her.

Undoubtedly the greatest lawn tennis player whom I ever saw was Tilden, and I shall always regret that he became a professional, so that we shall not see him this year. Borotra, whose play has given more pleasure to more people than most men, is missing from the singles, too.

Borotra is an excellent dancer, and some seasons ago we met at the French Embassy, and he and Sir Robert—now Lord—Horne and I danced till an early hour.

Lord Horne told me once that, when he was at the Treasury, his mother came from Edinburgh to London to go to the Palace garden party, and was anxious to be presented to the Queen. They walked together in the garden till they saw the crowd which was following Queen Mary.

I will relate what he said in his own words: "I had no difficulty in passing through the orderly people who assemble annually to the delightful Palace parties. After my mother had made her curtsey to the Queen, I think she expected to hear something flattering of myself.

"To her surprise, Queen Mary graciously expressed the hope that my mother's journey from Edinburgh to London had in no way fatigued her, and added: 'I hear that Sir Robert is very fond of dancing and is an excellent dancer.'

"This praise flattered me more than it pleased my mother." Queen Mary was right. I would rather valse with Lord Horne than with any young man in a London ballroom.

SHE GAVE UP BRIDGE.

AFTER I had talked to Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, we were invited in the interval to have tea, and joined Princess Helena Victoria and Princess Marie Louise, who were sitting with Sir Samuel Hoare and others of the committee at the tea table. I said to Princess Marie Louise that I knew she played golf, but asked her if she played bridge. She replied that at one time she loved bridge, but had given it up, and challenged us to guess why. She said: "You will never, never guess why I gave up playing bridge."

None of us could think of the reason. She said: "Because I always, always won." At which Sir Samuel Hoare said: "That, ma'am, would never have deterred me." The Princess said: "But you can't think how awkward it was to sit down with players who said: 'It's no good playing against Louise, as she always wins.' So I gave it up, and have never regretted it."

This was said with the greatest possible modesty. It came on to rain while we were at tea, and more or less cleared up after we had finished, but it was still drizzling when we returned. My chair was behind the Duchess of Kent, and, not liking to see her pretty dress and fur boa damaged in the drizzle, I put the rug on my knees round her shoulders. At which she turned and thanked me with a lovely smile.

She is not really like the beautiful Queen Alexandra, but she has the same dignity and carriage, and reminded me of her when I saw the photographs of her in the newspapers driving to Ascot.

THE GARDENER'S CORNER

Roses Are Slowly Coming Into Bloom

By "THE MAN WITH THE HOE"

ROSES are now coming slowly into bloom after a hard, cold time experienced during the Spring. Shot silk is still well in the front again. This rose is stated to be "the most popular of all roses," both for its colour and its strong otto of rose perfume. Another rose which is in great demand is Mevrouw G. A. van Rossem, and another very distinctive rose now blooming, which may be grown in a bed by itself or in shrubbery is Rosa Moyesii; it has dark red single flowers which are followed by large red bottle-litre berries. It grows six to ten feet in height and comes from West China. It requires very little pruning.

Seeing the Newer Varieties.

There are many others worthy of note. A visit to a rose nursery is the best way of seeing the newer varieties and of choosing them for autumn planting.

The planting out of seedling perennial and other flowers from boxes and pans or from a nursery bed is a pleasant enough occupation in warm, moist, weather, as once they are in their permanent quarters the only thing to remember is to keep the weeds down, and, if necessary, to stake the plants. Stocks, asters, heliotropes, verbenas, dahlias, begonias, and others are now being shifted. A rubber mat for kneeling on during the operation of planting, makes the work less arduous than constant stooping. Once the plants are out, it is interesting to watch their progress day by day. Weeds this year have been abnormal, and it has almost been impossible to keep them in check, except by constant attention. They are the evils which have to be kept under in the cultivation of one's garden.

Everlasting sweet peas are attractive plants and once they are well established they come up year after year with little attention. One seen recently in a nursery was purchased; it was Lathyrus Drummondii; its flowers are salmon-red in colour and it comes in early. It is sometimes catalogued as L. rotundifolius; there is also L. splendens, Pride of California, which has "large deep crimson" flowers, and L. bartonensis with "exquisite lavender blue" flowers, and there is also a white flowered variety and one with golden yellow flowers. Seed of the above are stocked by some seedsmen who specialise in uncommon seeds.

In the Rock Garden.

In rock gardens the Rock roses have been a feature of late, showing in masses of red, yellow, purple and white. There are single and double varieties, the latter being very attractive and beautiful. These plants may be raised from seed, or may be propagated by cuttings four inches long, put into pots of sandy soil in September and placed in a cold frame or greenhouse. Aubrietias and Nephetas are still showing masses of colour in some places and have lightened up the spring days right into summer. Pinks, too, are now showing in perfection, scenting the air with their fragrance, and Carnations "the sweetest flowers of the season" will soon be here.

In the kitchen garden the thinning out of such vegetables as turnips, carrots, beet, radish and parsnips continues, and as these plants are growing rapidly it must not be neglected. Radishes especially require this to be done in order to get good sized roots. The thinning out of plants is best done when the ground is moist. Cucumbers are now being planted in frames over hot-beds. When the leader is over a foot long it is generally stopped—that is, the point nipped off; and when the side shoots have fruits they are stopped at a joint beyond where the fruit is set, and if the shoots are too numerous they are usually thinned out. Vegetable Marrows are now being planted on mounds specially made up for them with leaves and manure with soil on the top. The main shoot is stopped when it is eighteen inches long. The fertilisation of both cucumbers and marrows is generally done by hand once, but insects do a lot in this respect.

Peas and Beans in Favour.

Peas and beans are now in flower and a dish or two of these vegetables when fresh is very desirable and will soon be forthcoming in quantity. Leeks are now being dibbled into nursery beds so that they may thicken and grow strong for their final planting in the plot alloted for the leek bed. They are an admirable vegetable for use during winter and spring. Where early potatoes have been dug out is a good place for planting leeks, no further manure as a rule being required. These vegetables respond to frequent applications of soot dusted on them in wet weather.

Celery is also being planted in trenches. It is a famous winter vegetable which is much improved by the application of sulphate of ammonia given during moist weather in small quantities at a time. The celery trench in the first instance should be heavily manured to get good results.

THE CAMERON CLAN.

RALLY AT ANCESTRAL HOME

PAY HOMAGE TO THEIR CHIEFTAIN.

Seven hundred loyal members of the Clan Cameron assembled on Friday to pay homage to their chief, Sir Donald Walter Cameron, of Lochiel, at Achnacarry Castle, the ancestral home of the chiefs of the Clan Cameron.

As the day wore on more and more visitors arrived, and the grounds were filled with eager sightseers anxious to see the romantic spots redolent of the days of the '45 Rebellion, when the gentle Lochiel, who was planting a beech wood, heard the call to arms, and hurriedly marshalled 800 of his clan to join the Young Pretender at Glenfinnan.

He gave orders that the trees should be tended pending his return. He never returned, but died in exile in France.

Massive and ivy clad, the thickness of the castle walls brought astonished gasps from overseas members of the clan, for many of whom it was their first visit to the land from which their forefathers had emigrated a century ago.

Intermingling with the music of the Gaelic and the soft lilting voices of the West Highlands could be heard the accents of Canadians, Americans, and visitors from India, Burma, Australia, Tasmania, and Kenya.

On every hand was heard the delighted surprise with which relationships were discovered.

MARCH PAST CASTLE.

The huge gathering of Camerons assembled on the terrace, and marched past the entrance of the castle. They were greeted by Lochiel of Cameron, Lady Hermione Cameron of Lochiel, Mr. Donald Hamish Cameron, the younger of Lochiel, and Mrs. Stewart, of Ardvorlich.

Each person was introduced by Mr. Norman Macrae, Lochiel's piper.

The oldest member of the clan presented was Mr. Alexander Gray, of Corpach, who is 94, and the youngest was 18 months old.

Lochiel then inspected a squad of territorials of the 4th Camerons, who travelled specially from camp. Every member was a Cameron by name.

Lochiel, in a short speech, thanked the clansmen for their presence, and complimented them on their fine bearing.

The high-light of the day was a spectacular march past of the Camerons, preceded by the Inverlochy Pipe Band, and led by Mr. Donald Hamish Cameron, of Lochiel, and other members of the Lochiel family.

Lochiel said he had sent in their name a telegram of loyalty to his Majesty and a message of sympathy to the Queen, and had received a reply, which he read. He conveyed messages of greeting from clansmen from Australia.

He said that James, sixth Lochiel, forfeited all his land, but a great part had been restored. How long these would remain in the family only the future could tell. Times were getting more and more difficult, and the idea had been suggested to him that the lands be taken over by a clan trust and preserved for the clan for ever. The idea had his warmest approval.

Lady Hermione Cameron of Lochiel said that Cameron women would understand and feel what she felt when she saw young Lochiel leading the march past his father.

The gathering broke up to the martial strains of the "March of the Cameron Men," sung by the entire gathering.

RATHER FINE POINT, SAID COUNSEL.

RAISED IN DUBLIN COURT.

BELFASTMAN'S £294 CLAIM.

Before Mr. Justice O'Byrne, in the High Court, Dublin, Max Edelstyn, of East Street, Belfast, claimed £294 against Leo Coleman, trading as the Dublin Feather Company, Temple Lane, Dublin, money stated to be due by the defendant to the plaintiff on foot of a judgment for £279 and costs, received by the plaintiff against the defendant in the High Court of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Costello, K.C., for the plaintiff, said that the action raised a rather fine point. The action in the High Court of Northern Ireland was in respect of a contract for the delivery of certain goods ordered by the defendant from the plaintiff. The contract was reduced to writing, signed by the defendant in Northern Ireland, and it provided for the delivery of the goods at a ship at Belfast for delivery in England. No part of the transaction was to be performed in Eire, and the fact that the contract was reduced to writing and signed in Northern Ireland was not contradicted by the defendant, beyond a mere averment that he had a good defence.

The defendant had not indicated what that defence was. In fact, the correspondence showed that he had agreed to pay for the goods at a certain period, and there was an allegation that if the judgment was obtained he said he would pay only if a certain sum was taken off it, and that if that sum were not taken off he would raise the point that there was no jurisdiction to sue him in the courts of Eire for this judgment.

The defendant, said Mr. Costello, stated that he had been residing in Dublin since 1906, and that he had never resided in Northern Ireland, and consequently the judgment of the Northern Ireland High Court could not be enforced against him in Eire.

The Judge—This is not a case of enforcing; it is a case of suing.

QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

Mr. Costello—It is suing. His contention will be that the Courts of Northern Ireland have no jurisdiction over him.

While defendant said that he had been residing in Dublin since 1906 he did not say that he was not a British subject, and assuming that he was then that was not open to him.

Mr. Costello quoted a judgment of Mr. Justice Blackburn that the fact of a contract was entered into within the jurisdiction appeared to give the Courts power and jurisdiction to decide the rights of a defendant who was a party to the contract. That was only an expression of opinion, said Mr. Costello, and the contrary view was taken by the Privy Council in 1894.

Mr. Costello also referred to Dicey's Conflict of Laws where, amongst other things, it was set out that a defendant was subject to the jurisdiction of a foreign Court if he either expressedly or impliedly contracted to accept jurisdiction of the Court, and he submitted that the making of the contract in Northern Ireland was enough in itself to be a contract to accept jurisdiction when any question arose, but he had to say that the view expressed by the Privy Council was contrary to that.

The Judge said that the action raised a very nice point, and a very important point, which would have to go to the Supreme Court. He would follow the decision of the Privy Council, and would dismiss the action with costs.

KNOCKED DOWN BY ENGINE.

SCOTS RAILMEN KILLED.

ANOTHER BADLY INJURED.

Two railway surfacemen were killed outright and a third was critically injured when they were struck by an engine at Hillington Station, near Glasgow, to-day.

The men were repairing defective points and had stepped clear of the rails to allow an engine to pass. Another engine travelling in the opposite direction kncoked them down.

The condition of the injured man, James Patterson (62), of Cathcart Road, Glasgow, is critical.

The men killed were John Meikle (49), of Avonpark Street, Glasgow, and Duncan Greenlees (28), of Cunard Street, Clydebank.

SINGING ON THE MARCH.

INFANTRY RULE DROPPED.

Soldiers marching to the accompaniment of sentimental songs and an occasional overture on the mouthorgan may soon be a thing of the past, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

Revised infantry training shortly to be published will have less about march discipline than the manual to be superseded and nothing about singing on the march.

Compilers of the old training manual did not forsee the moving of an infantry brigade in lorries and among the rules to be observed by battalion commanders was one advocating organised singing.

Mechanisation gives little or no opportunity for singing when on the move. It is largely on this account that reginental bands have not in recent years accompanied column on the march.

THE HAT AND THE RABBIT.

COST TWO MEN THEIR LIVES.

Two strange stories from the Continent of a hat and a rabbit which caused the death of two men.

The hat belonged to Duskan Shubakovitch, a 17-year-old youth of Lipnitsa in Serbia who thought his friend Dragoslav Mrshtrovitch had thrown it into a stream. Enraged he shot Dragoslav through the heart.

Later it was established that the hat had been blown into the stream by a gust of wind.

The rabbit suddenly ran across the path of a man who was cycling home in Schlangen, near Detmold, in Germany. The machine was overturned and the rider thrown so heavily that he was killed on the spot.—Reuter.

BRITISH SUBJECT REPRIEVED.

BEFORE TIME FOR EXECUTION.

NEW YORK, Friday.—Robert Shaw, who is stated to be a British subject, was granted a reprieve 27 minutes before the time scheduled for his execution at Michigan City, Indiana, to-day.

The warden of the jail on reading the commitment papers discovered that Shaw had been sentenced without a jury, which is illegal in Indiana.

Shaw had pleaded guilty to killing Sheriff Henry Spice.—Central News.

WHY MAGISTRATE SMILED.

COINCIDENCES IN LONDON COURT.

Mr. Frank Powell, the London magistrate, smiled broadly at Clerkenwell Police Court on Friday afternoon when his own surname was called out in a list of persons summoned for non-payment of income-tax.

The list also included the surnames of Mr. Brodrick, one of the magistrates attached to the Court (but spelt Broderick), and that of another London magistrate—Mr. Harris.

The last name on the list called out in a loud voice by the stalwart assistant warrant officer was "Samuel Pope!" The late Mr. Samuel Pope formerly sat on the Clerkenwell Bench.

A defendant in the ordinary summons list bore the surname of Campbell. Sir Rollo Graham Campbell is the chief magistrate sitting at Bow Street. Coincidence had by this time, however, borne too heavy a strain. Campbell's car broke down on the way to the Court (according to a telephone message reported to the magistrate), and the case was adjourned.

Another defendant's name was Chamberlain. This is not the name of a London magistrate.

LONDON ZOO BUDGERIGARS.

UPSET BY AVIARY PAINTERS.

The budgerigars at the Regent's Park Zoo are indignant because decorators have interrupted nesting in their aviary. These birds nest repeatedly from March to October, and they would probably try to rear chicks all the winter if their nesting boxes were not removed.

Usually their aviary is redecorated just before the nesting boxes are put back early in March, but this year the work was delayed. When the painters were ready to start they were prevented from doing so because some of the budgerigars were already nesting and could not be disturbed.

By the time these budgerigars had reared their chicks others had eggs, and so it went on, and the decorators were kept waiting, writes "H. M. S." in the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

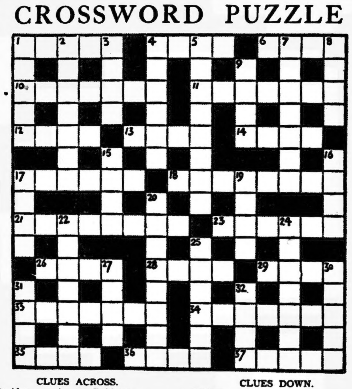

A few days ago the keeper saw his chance. Although several budgerigars were preparing to nest again, none of them had eggs, and he removed the nesting boxes. Painting was begun, and the budgerigars reluctantly retired to indoor quarters. They now sit together in a row looking as if they are wondering how long they will have to wait before they can settle down to more nesting.

GLIDER PERCHED ON TREE TOP.

When a glider came down on the top of a wood Mr. Richard Linn, a Cambridge University student, was perched on the top of a tree for an hour and a half at Devizes yesterday. Mr. Linn was making his first attempt at hill soaring from Roundway Down, near Devizes, where the Cambridge University Gliding Club are practising hill soaring.

After two minutes in the air he came down on a thick wood, a distant motorist saw his predicament and warned the police. Mr. Linn was rescued unhurt by a fire ladder, but the glider was damaged.

LINEN TRADE REVIEW

Dull Period Continues.—Due to World Conditions.—General Trade Recession.—Prices Remain Firm.—Improvement in Clothing End.—U.S. Recovery Hopes.—Difficulties in China.—Reports from Sources of Supply.

Little has occurred during the week in way of any fresh activity that might indicate a return to normal conditions. On the contrary, the dullness in practically all sections of the trade still continues. Looking at the industry as a whole the present conditions are depressing, but, viewed in the light of world conditions, they are neither surprising nor alarming. While the demand for linen goods for some time past has been much below normal, the industry is no worse off than other larger textile industries who employ a far greater number of operatives.

If one looks at the position of trade from a wider point of view, it is quite evident that for some months past there has been a steady decline in United Kingdom trade as shown by recent Board of Trade returns. Two other barometers are noteworthy, viz., the monthly trade and navigation accounts of the United Kingdom and the weekly railway traffic returns, both of which show marked declines. United Kingdom exports for May are down by 7 per cent. compared with May of last year, the latter showing a steady decline month by month since the beginning of the year. In addition, unemployment has increased by over 300,000. The fact cannot be denied that these returns bear witness to a distinct and growing recession in trade, which makes the outlook discouraging, especially when it is realised that a certain stimulus has been given to industry by the abnormal expenditure on rearmaments, and even more noticeable than any other is the alarming drop in the export of textile goods. These are the conditions that the industry is faced with at the present time, and it is difficult to forecast the trend that events may take. The future, therefore, must rest in the lap of the gods.

Home Market Quiet.

The home market is quiet, and it is reported wholesale houses are carrying fairly heavy stocks. Demand for household linens can only be described as moderate. Linen damasks are more encouraging. Several inquiries for these goods have been asked for recently in the finer qualities, and, in addition, some orders have been booked.

Dress linen, cambrics, and crashes have been rather slow in demand, but some firms are still receiving orders for sorting up lots, but quantities, as a rule, are small.

Notwithstanding the dull trend that business has taken, prices still remain firm. Manufacturers are still faced with the problem of keeping their looms occupied, but no speculative buying has been reported in this section of the trade, and it is thought there will be little change in this respect, until a demand comes from the cloth end, and when that takes place the opinion is prices will advance.

Merchanting houses still complain of the paucity of orders, and while some report slightly better results on the week, others report quite the contrary. It is pleasing to record some improvement in the clothing section of the trade during the week. Some new business has been received in addition to several specifications for immediate delivery of goods on order. It would have been considered extraordinary if this end of the trade did not make some recovery at this season of the year. Further improvement is expected.

Business is still being maintained with British India, Australia, and South Africa. Each of these countries show an increased output in exports on the year's trading, whereas New Zealand and Canada have receded somewhat over the same period. Both the Cuban and South American markets show a decline in output. On the whole, our foreign export trade is quiet, and while shipping houses are now busy preparing shipments of orders taken some time ago, there is an absence of any new business.

U.S. and Chinese Markets.

While a certain amount of United States business is being done in small and medium lots, potential buyers, it is understood, are deferring their requirements until a settlement of the Trade Agreement has been completed. It is thought something definite may be known before the forthcoming holidays here. While many hopes are centred on a trade revival with our principal market, it must not be forgotten that much depends on how quickly that country recovers from her internal difficulties. The expenditure of so vast a sum as £600,000,000 is bound to react favourably on commerce. The big drop in returns for May this year compared with the same month last year is mainly attributed to the hold-up in shipments to this market.

The slowing down in business with China, as reported in these columns last week, has become more apparent recently. The difficulties with which British interests in North China are now faced arise from the complete absence in connection with the recent note issue of the new Federal Reserve Bank, backed by the Japanese authorities, in place of Chinese national currency.

It is reported that the attention of the Foreign Office has been drawn to this matter, which threatens to force out of business British firms which have been engaged for many years in the import and export trade of North China. Japanese economic activities in that part of the country of late have been most conspicuous. Japan appears to have devised a new technique to enable her to reap the full benefit of the economic development of this area by creating conditions which, in effect, constitute monopolies.

Anglo-Australian Trade.

As mentioned in last week's review, several Australian Ministers are in this country at the present time, and discussions are proceeding relative to the renegotiation of the Ottawa Agreement.

If it is true that Australia is anxious to secure a modification of Clauses 9-13 in the existing agreement, and if such modifications were agreed to by H.M. Government, the result would be that Australia would be left entirely free to impose duties at any rates she liked, and in her endeavours to increase the sales of her produce and products to come to agreements with foreign countries, largely as a result of her freedom of action thus gained, and at the expense of the British industrialist. In view of the treatment of Australian products in the U.K. market, the unfairness of such a proposal seems obvious.

The view has been expressed that it has been the readjustment of certain clauses in the Ottawa Agreement that has delayed the completion of the Anglo-American Trade Agreement. One cannot too highly praise the efforts made at all times by the Federation of British Industries in zealously safeguarding the interests of the British industrialist.

Yarns and Flax.

The position as regards yarn remains the same. Small lots are still being taken up at concessions, but no purchases of any bulk that would call for any special comment. While tows are being neglected there have been some moderate sales in finer numbers.

The high cost of flax still continues to make the position difficult, and is accentuated by the depressed conditions existing at the present time. There are no evidences of any wavering in the cost of flax, and the position can only be described as static.

Continental Reports.

Lille Flax.—There is very little business in Russian and Baltic flax. Offers are rare, and prices are being maintained at limits which spinners cannot contemplate. Russia has withdrawn completely from the market. German spinners were negotiating for the purchase of 1,000 to 1,500 tons of Lithuanian flax, but apparently have not been able to come to terms. The Latvian Government is maintaining its prices, while deliveries of Estonian flax have practically ceased.

Quotations are on the basis of £50 (gold) for Group IV., first quality, £43 (gold) Basis R. for Livonian, £43 (gold) Basis R. for Werropetchour, £35 (gold) Basis R. for Haut-Courlande.

There is a small volume of business in French flax at unchanged prices. The new crop is in good condition in the Flanders region, although it has been handicapped by cold weather; in Brittany, on the other hand, drought has damaged the crop in certain areas, and unless more rain and milder conditions appear shortly, the quality will be seriously affected. In Normandy the later sowings are experiencing much better conditions than the March sowings, which have suffered from drought.

Prices for Belgian flax, ordinary quality, are somewhat easier; on the other hand, average and superior qualities, for which demand is more active, have advanced slightly. On the whole, however, the market is experiencing less activity, as United Kingdom and German spinners have decreased their purchases.

In the Courtrai district the crop appears to be in good condition, but in Walloon the standard is not so good.

The situation in tows remains unchanged. There is little activity in scutched tows, but hackled tows, on the other hand, are in greater demand.

Belgian Flax.

Ghent.—A slight recovery on the scutched flax market is reported; domestic and foreign spinners were more active in the week under review, although prices were not affected. The white flower variety is still out of favour, and farmers and scutchers who have sown this type of flax are greatly concerned as to how they will dispose of it.

The market for Belgian scutched flax can be described as firm, when it is considered that current prices are substantially the same as at the corresponding period of last year, whereas the prices for other raw materials such as cotton, wool, rubber, etc., have decreased considerably in the same period.

Some indication of what the future holds for the Belgian market may be gathered from estimated figures of flax production. The acreage under flax in Belgium shows an increase of 10,000 acres compared with last year; in France the increase amounts to 5,000-7,500 acres, and in Holland to 5,000 acres, while, on the other hand, in Russia there is a decrease of almost 2,000,000 acres, the figures being 2,485,000 in May 1938, compared with 4,465,000 in 1937. It is not surprising that Belgian spinners who formerly gave preference to Russian and Baltic flax are beginning to purchase Belgian flax.

Greater activity on the part of French spinners is reported in the week under review. Their purchases included a large proportion of inferior qualities and tow.

Irish spinners purchased their usual quota of suitable grades.

German spinners are slightly more interested in the market for Belgian flax, but they still confine their attention to superior and select grades. Apparently sufficient quantities of inferior grades are available on the Russian and Baltic markets.

There is nothing new to report as regards the market for tow.

Courtrai.—There is some revival of interest in Courtrai scutched flax, but not sufficient to affect prices. United Kingdom spinners are the main support of the market, although French spinners acquired important lots of short flaxes and scutched tow in the week under review, and Germany purchased her usual quota.

Russia and Baltic.

There is a dull tone on the Russian and Baltic markets; business in the centres of consumption is very limited, owing to the difficulties which spinners find in adjusting the price of yarn to the price of raw material. Generally speaking, the tendency is firm, particularly in Soviet flax, but there is a certain degree of weakness in Baltic flax.

The Russian monopoly maintains a firm front. Nothing is known of its intentions regarding the export trade, and in these circumstances spinners have come to consider the market as closed. According to the meagre information which has been received on the subject of the new crop, it is believed that the sowings are very much in arrears compared with last year. At mid-May, in fact, only half the contemplated programme had been carried out.

Latvia. — German spinners are interested in this market, and are reported to be in negotiation with the Government for the purchase of a substantial quantity. The tone of the market is firm, owing to the recent transaction completed with Sweden.

Estonia.—There is nothing of interest to report as regards Estonian flax; the recent transaction with Germany has practically exhausted the available stock. Growers are making very few deliveries.

Lithuania.—Germany is interested in this flax also, and it is expected that the negotiations which are proceeding at the moment will result in another sale.

According to information which has been received, German spinners may buy 2,000 tons. Purchases on behalf of Czecho-Slovakia are also reported.

Flax and Tow Yarns.

Lille.—There is no alteration in the condition of the market. Prices have not yet been effectively adjusted to the level of prices for raw material.

"EPIDEMICS" IN SPAIN.

PROTECTIVE MEASURES BY FRANCE

PERPIGNAN, Friday.—Efforts are to be made to protect the French populations of the frontier regions from the risk of infection from epidemics that are now prevalent in Spanish territory, wires the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent. So serious is the situation that a special mission has been sent up to the frontier to study the question.

During the past days herds of cattle from the region, formerly occupied by the 43rd Division, have crossed the frontier. These animals have also been used for the feeding of the population of the Putgcerda neighbourhood, where a serious outbreak of fooot-and-mouth disease is in progress.

More than 500 people have been stricken down by eating diseased animals, and eight deaths are reported from a fever epidemic which may be spotted fever, though more probably typhoid.

WHEN THE CRYSTAL PALACE OPENED.

WHAT U.S. WOMAN SAYS.

SHE REMEMBERS THAT DAY.

New York is looking ahead to its gigantic World Fair, and so is Mrs. George F. Lewis, because she can remember the 1851 London Exhibition, and the Industries of All Nations Exhibition in New York two years later.

She is a benign old lady of 96 summers and vows she will go to the New York show in 1939. "I was only a little girl when Queen Victoria opened the Crystal Palace," said Mrs. Lewis, "but I can remember it clearly. The Crystal Palace was in Hyde Park and we lived near it. The Queen rode in a golden coach, and she bowed to all the people. I remember it even better than the New York Fair. Maybe because it was better. My father used to drive me in his carriage to see them building the New York palace. When it opened we went to it two or three times."

Mrs. Lewis, whose son and six daughters are all living, crossed the Atlantic aboard the sailing vessel Devonshire. She left London Wharf, she said, and landed at Spring Street after a voyage of five weeks and three days. Naturalisation and American citizen, a daughter said, had not dulled her mother's English patriotism. The burning of the Crystal Palace on November 30, 1936, was a distinct shock to her.

The president of the New York World Fair has announced that any persons who had visited the fair of 1853 would be welcomed to the fair of 1939 as "special guests" of the management.

COLOURED CAPS FOR DIVERS.

Public service vehicle drivers and private chauffeurs in Istanbul (Constantinople) are to have the same uniform, but you will be able to tell the difference by the colour of their caps.

The new uniform has been chosen by the Municipal Council, who have also decreed the various coloured caps. A red cap will denote a private chaffeur, a blue one a taxi-driver, bus-drivers will wear white caps, and green caps will be reserved for lorry drivers. The scheme is part of plans for the improvement of the city of Istanbul which, costing the municipality and the Government many millions of pounds, will be carried out by "instalments" over a period of ten years.

HE "KNEW" THE JUDGE.

Magistrate Mark Rudich met an "old friend" in his Brooklyn court, but he had never heard of him before.

Arraigned before him was 40-year-old Frederick Reilly on a vagrancy charge. The magistrate remarked that Reilly had been convicted six times for vagrancy and intoxication.

"Oh, no judge," pleaded Reilly, "not that last time, not on February 20."

"You received a suspended sentence, but that's a conviction," said the magistrate.

"Well, there's something wrong," muttered Reilly. "My good friend Judge Rudich fixed that for me and he let me go."

"You know Magistrate Rudich?" asked the Judge.

"Sure," said Reilly. "Mark and I are just like like that," and he raised his hand holding two fingers close together.

"I am glad to hear that," said the Judge. "But I'm sure Judge Rudich would want to give you 30 days in jail because you violated his confidence when he was lenient last time."

"No," protested Reilly, "he'd let me go again."

But Reilly's "good friend" did not agree. "You are sentenced," he said, "to 30 days. When your time is up, maybe you could see Judge Rudich and talk to him about it."

PETROL FOR NOTHING.

Ben Dietrich is a Medford (Oregon) lad, only 19 years of age with an inventive genius.

He fitted an extra petrol tank behind the front seat of his little car. A "T" connection was fitted to the intake manifold with a tube leading from one end of the connections in the "T" to the extra petrol tank. When in need of petrol he would drive up to a station after dark, lift the lid of the underground storage tank, drop a hose down, open the vacuum line, and start the engine, thus effecting an excellent syphon.

But he was caught and now his genius is confronted with three months in prison and a £10 fine.

AS ONE HUSBAND TO ANOTHER.

The new Chief Secretary here (says a Sydney N.S.W. message), Mr. Gollan, has such an energetic physical fitness code that he has received a mild protest from a colleague.

Mr. Gollan gets out of bed, it has been revealed, at 5.40 a.m., and makes a cup of tea for his wife, the gardener, and himself. Then he has a cold shower. "It is just fine these winter mornings," he comments.

But the Minister of Labour and Industry, Mr. Dunningham, lodged an informal protest. "What a nice pal you are," he said, explaining that his own wife had heard of Mr. Gollan's practice of making tea for his wife and had demanded that he should do the same.

But Mr. Dunningham hopes to get out of it somehow.

REDUCING ELOPEMENTS.

A new law passed by the Turkish Parliament fixed the lowest legal age for marriage for Turkish boys at 17 and that for girls at 15.

It is hoped that the new law will serve to reduce the number of elopements and abductions which have become more frequent in the country recently. More weddings are expected.

Discretionary powers are being granted to Judges to authorise boys to marry at 16 and girls at 14, if exceptional circumstances justify this.

IT'S AN OLD PROBLEM.

Native women at East London (Cape Province) are alarmed at the decision of the local Council to operate the monopoly for brewing and selling Kaffir beer. They think it will have an adverse effect on their husbands. About 200 natives, mostly women, paraded the streets before making a protest to the Mayor, Colonel V. G. Lewis, about the Council's decision.

Colonel Lewis stated later in an interview that two women who spoke for the natives expressed the fear that their husbands would spend much time and consume large quantities of beer in the canteens which it is proposed to establish under the scheme.

The Mayor said he thought their fears were unfounded and that the remedy lay with the women themselves. If they made their homes attractive to their husbands they would not spend much time in the canteens. He urged them to accept the scheme as one which would operate to the benefit of all concerned rather than to the men's detriment.

£11,000 IN ELEVEN MONTHS.

WHAT AN ENGLISH FARMER SPENT.

Peter Henry Edmund Grisewood, aged 30, a farmer, of Beechgrove Farm, Bledlow Ridge, near Aylesbury, admitted to Mr. J. L. Polland, the official receiver at Aylesbury Bankruptcy Court yesterday that he had spent £11,863 in eleven months. His unsecured liabilities were estimated at £1,623 8s, and his assets were estimated to produce £482 8s 1d, leaving a deficiency of £1,141 0s 1d.

Grisewood said he left his farm unattended for two months in 1937 to go on a Continental holiday with his wife, mother-in-law and friend, and he spent £800 or £900.

"When I came back the farm was in a chaotic condition," he said.

His failure was stated to be due to gross extravagance, lack of business experience and inability to manage his affairs to the best advantage.

The examination was adjourned until September.

BRITAIN'S LARGEST SEA LION

"OLD BILL" IN BELFAST

"OLD BILL," BRITAIN'S BIGGEST SEA LION, RECEIVING A "TIT BIT" FROM KEEPER FOSTER AT BELLEVUE ZOO.

Mr. Dick Foster, the head keeper of Bellevue Zoological Gardens, Belfast, was waiting on the landing stage in the rain on Friday. He was very perturbed, wondering what this consignment was going to bring him, and when the ship docked he raced aboard to see the zoo's new guests.

On going below he got the shock of his life to find that the consignment was "Old Bill," the biggest sea lion in the Kingdom. Mr. Foster could not see any more crates labelled "Bellevue Zoo," so on making inquiries and not being satisfied that this was a complete shipment he phoned to his headquarters in London from the ship and then learnt that the two chimpanzees had missed the connection at Crewe.

The chimpanzees were later found. They arrived in the city to-day and are now on view at the zoo. These two "Chimps" are only lent to Belfast Zoo and Mr. Foster has given an undertaking that he will release them in time for the Christmas Circus.

PAY VISIT TO QUEEN MARY.

EX-KAISER'S GRANDCHILDREN.

Princess George of Greece, Prince Frederick of Prussia, and Princess Cecile of Prussia visited Queen Mary at Marlborough House on Friday, stated the Court Circular last night.

Princess Cecile is the youngest of six children of the former Crown Prince and Princess of Germany.

Prince Frederick, fourth and youngest son of the Crown Prince, has made several visits to this country, and with his sister visited Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace in 1936.

Both the Prince and Princess were guests in 1935 of the late Lord Jellicoe and Lady Jellicoe.

HAMMOND BOWLED FOR CHANCELESS 240

MORE RECORDS SET UP

LOPSIDED HOME INNINGS

AUSTRALIA HAD TO GO IN AGAINST A TOTAL OF 494 IN THE SECOND TEST MATCH AT LORD'S. THAT WAS MAINLY BECAUSE OF THE SUPERB WAY IN WHICH WALTER HAMMOND MASTERED THEIR BOWLFOR SIX HOURS.

WITHOUT THE CAPTAIN'S 240, PAYNTER'S 99, AND 83 BY AMES ENGLAND'S SCORE WOULD HAVE LOOKED A POOR THING.

HAMMOND AND AMES.

Two more records were left behind before the innings ended.

Hammond and Ames beat the sixth wicket record of Sutcliffe and Wyatt, who put on 170 at the Oval in 1930.

Hammond made top score by an Englishman for any home Test.

To-day's attendance was larger than Friday's, and hundreds of people sitting on the grass inside the boundary were allowed to keep their places, the ropes being moved forward.

Chipperfield, the Australian all-rounder, did not take part in the second Test Match at Lord's to-day, but, if his finger, which he split on Friday when trying to stop a hit from Hammond, progresses satisfactorily, he may bat on Monday. Chipperfield to-day underwent an x-ray examination, the result of which will not be known till to-morrow.

"We do not think Chipperfield's finger is broken," said Mr. W. H. Jeanes, the Australian manager, "but, just to make assurance doubly certain, he is being x-rayed. Any decision as to whether he will be able to play again in the Test Match will, therefore, have to wait until the result is known."

IN SIGHT OF FRESH RECORDS.

Visitors to Lord's to-day for the second stage of the Test Match had great expectations of fresh cricket history being made.

No England captain had ever before scored so many runs against Australia as Walter Hammond, who had 210 already in the score book and was not out. Hammond had also shared with Paynter the honour of smashing a 33-year-old record for England's fourth wicket. To-day he and Ames needed to add only 33 to the 138 they put on on Friday to beat the English sixth wicket record in the series.

Well within Hammond's grasp was the feat of playing the highest innings against Australia in England. To do that he required no more than seven runs, and everyone was hoping England's captain would go out to beat R. E. Foster's 287 in the 1903-04 Tests, which stands as the highest score ever by an Englishman against Australia.

The "old hands" in England's eleven—Hammond, Paynter and Ames—did a grand job of work on Friday. Between them they scored all but 50 of the 409 runs that accrued for the loss of five wickets.

Another "full house" was an absolute certainty, with the weather continuing fine and warm and the match in such an interesting position.

Outside St. John's Wood Road Station hundreds of people were struggling to get to the ground, and as many more were intent upon returining to the trains, realising that the chance of securing admission without a ticket was nil.

The gates were closed at 10-45, 12,000 people having passed through the turnstiles.

The Lord's police staff were mobilised to deal with an overflow of spectators beyond the boundary ropes. There were rows of people ten deep sitting on the playing pitch. Umpires, police and the assistant secretary of the M.C.C. had a consultation as to how to solve the problem.

Bradman and Hammond next conferred with the umpires, and eventually, five minutes late, play was continued with a section of the crowd still sitting inside the boundary. Difficulty was bound to arise if a ball was skied in that direction. A fieldsman could not hope to catch a ball within four yards of the boundary without treading upon spectators. M'Cabe and O'Reilly carried on Australia's attack against Hammond (210) and Ames (50). Hammond soon displaced Paynter as highest scorer against Australia in this country, and Ames made one sparkling off-drive for four.

Keen to secure every possible advantage, Bradman lost no time in asking for a new ball and putting on M'Cormick at 426. One delivery got up quickly and struck Hammond a painful blow just above the elbow.

England's captain a little earlier surpassed his 217 against India in 1936, which stood as the highest individual innings for England in a home Test Match.

Hammond was playing with ease and the England sixth wicket against Australia was left behind. Eight years ago in the Oval Test Sutcliffe and R. E. S. Wyatt put on 170, and Wyatt was present to-day to see this record smashed.

HAMMOND OUT.

With a deft side-step Ames dodged a full powered straight drive from Hammond, four all the way. Another expert stroke was a cut well over the heads of three slip fielders when M'Cormick was no-balled. In the same over, however, Hammond's brilliant innings was closed. He played back to M'Cormick just a shade too late to protect his leg stump.

Hammond will never forget the warmth of the ovation that followed as he walked to the pavilion amid cheering and vociferous hand-clapping of a character rarely experienced at a cricket match. The Australians, of course, joined in. They must have been glad to see the back of a man who defied them a full six hours.

Hammond added 186 with Ames in the record-breaking sixth wicket stand lasting two and a half hours. His 240 made without a chance included 32 fours. When he went in England had two wickets down for 20. He batted in lordly fashion until the total was 457.

Verity fell quickly when O'Reilly went on for M'Cormick. He looked to be bowled off his pads. This brought in Wellard, seventh wicket down at 472, and the man from Somerset hit his first ball to the leg boundary and skied the next to a tremendous height. M'Cormick at deep mid-on held the ball coming down awkwardly as if it were the easiest thing in the world.

M'Cormick at 483 took a simple catch to get rid of Ames, who had batted resolutely for three hours and a quarter and afforded further proof that he remains England's best wicketkeeper batsman. Ames got the majority of his runs in front of the wicket and hit ten 4's.

The crowd enjoyed a few laughs during the last wicket stand. An effort by Bradman to catch Wright for three caused most of the merriment. The Australian captain, running hard, juggled with the ball several times and dropped it in the end.

Barnett, Australias' wicketkeeper, did not concede a bye until 492 runs had been scored. Another single brought the close of an innings lasting seven hours.

A significant point about the bowling figures was that Fleetwood-Smith did not take a wicket until eight men were out.

Australia began their innings at five minutes past one and nothing untoward occured during the early over by Farnes and Wellard.

Duding the break between the innings members of the ground staff shortened the boundary in ane corner by moving the ropes forward several yards.

In 25 minutes to lunch Fingleton and Brown scored 26, the runs including some skilfully made leg-hits by the latter.

BRITISH PLAYERS' ESCAPE

IN SOUTH AFRICAN TRAIN.

SERIOUS COLLISION AVERTED.

Members of the British Rugby football team touring South Africa had a narrow escape when the train in which they were travelling jumped the points near Heidelberg, between Mossel Bay and Capetown.

As they bore down on a stationary train in a siding the driver jammed on the brakes, averting a serious collision. When he pulled up his engine was actually touching the other train.

Many players were thrown from their bunks, but none was injured. They were on their way to Capetown for their match to-day against Western Province.

LANCASHIRE HELD.

GREAT BOWLING BY SMAILES

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Lancashire were held at bay yesterday by Worcestershire at Dudley, Gibbons and Cooper hitting a hundred off an attack which badly missed the injured Phillipson. Lancashire had to be content with first innings points.

Northamptonshire once more met defeat, all except Brookes and James failing in the second innings against Nottinghamshire, who avoided having to bat again by five runs.

Essx were set 54 runs to get by Somerset and, although they lost four wickets cheaply to Buse, recorded their first county championship win of the season. They were largely indebted to Nichols and Smith (P.)

Cambridge, unable to bring their second innings total up to a hundred, had not the bowling to make Hampshire's task of scoring 93 a difficult one, and were beaten by nine wickets.

Glamorgan collapsed in their first innings, the last nine wickets falling in less than an hour for 39 runs. Yorkshire lost five wickets in making 68 and declared, leaving Glamorgan 163 to get. In an exciting finish Yorkshire won by 12 runs, Smailes again bowling magnificently and returning an analysis for the match of fourteen wickets for 103 runs.

Gloucestershire were always struggling to avoid defeat by Kent. Neale and Haynes played pluckily and deprived Kent of an innings victory. Neale had the satisfaction of reaching his hundred, but Kent hit o ffthe necessary runs without loss.

Sussex, forced to bat one short owing to the injury to Smith, needed 358 to beat Oxford University. Oakes (J.) played a good innings, but Oxford's bowling was adequate and the University won by 112 runs.

FALSE FIRE ALARM NUISANCE.

SPANKING WOULD STOP IT.

MATTER FOR THE PARENTS.

Sir,—May I draw attention to the number of false fire alarms in the city. This is most unfair to our firemen, who sometimes have to rise from bed to find a false alarm. All this is practically due to young children, and parents should see that these alarms are stopped immediately.—Yours, etc.,

"ANNOYED."

THE SERMON TO KING WILLIAM.

Sir,—It is quite evident judging from the letter of Mr. Colin Robb (Armagh) and the various people who have called with me to see my copy of the sermon preached before King William in 1690 that the articles from the pen of Mr. Shannon Millin on the King William sermon have caused widespread interest. I had the pleasure of a personal interview with Mr. Millen, and while I respect his very learned opinion, I am still inclined to agree with Mr. Colin Robb that Sunday, the 15th of July, 1690, is the most likely date the sermon was preached. Mr Millin in his first article suggested that this sermon was preached at Belfast Castle. Two persons (a lady and a gentleman) who have since called with me challenge this statement, giving as their reason that the chair used on this occasion by King William is or was in St. George's Church, High Street. Unfortunately as far as I am concerned I have been unable up to the moment to find any documentary evidence to substantiate these statements. Perhaps some of your readers with a knowledge of the history of St. George's can supply us with interesting information on this subject. In conclusion I would like to congratulate the "Telegraph" for publishing such instructive and interesting articles as above.—Yours, etc.,

UNEMPLOYED IN HOLIDAY WEEK.

Sir,—I am very glad to see that Mr. W. Wilson has brought the plight of many unemployed during the July holiday week to the notice of the public. Many like myself made arrangements before being unemployed, and will either have to cancel or be at a loss, through having to sign twice during that week. Hoping to be excused from signing during the holiday week.—Yours, etc.,

J. J. DUFFY.

THE B.B.C. AND COURTESY.

Sir,—The reader who wrote complaining that he received no reply from the N.I.B.B.C. station officials should examine his postal receiving accommodation. I have never yet failed to receive a reply from any B.B.C. station—or from Radio Athlone. Nor can I accept as a fact the assumption that our B.B.C. officials are less courteous than those in foreign broadcasting organisations.—Yours, etc.

RESULTS OF THIRD ROUND.

VERY NICE DOUBLE POSSIBLES.

The only item of interest in the third round is a very nice double possible by W. Bennett (East Belfast "A"). Would statistical officers and match secretaries please note that Bangor "B" have withdrawn from the competition, therefore, in accordance with rule, all scores registered for or against them have been cancelled and the League table altered accordingly.

W. Gray (Bessbrook) also returned a double possible, but, unfortunately, this cannot be taken into account owing to the fact that Bessbrook were drawn against Bangor "B" in this round. Hard lines, Willie, but better luck the next time.

CHEYNE CHALLENGE CUP.

The disc-breaking competition at 100 yards for above trophy took place on Saturday at C.I.Y.M.S. Range, Clara Park, Belfast, under the auspices of the Ulster Association of Miniature Rifle Clubs.

The event proved very attractive, and 17 teams from the following clubs took part: R.U.C. (three teams), East Belfast (three teams), C.I.Y.M.S. (two teams), Bangor (two teams), Clandeboye (two teams), Springfield (two teams), Belfast Harbour Police (one team), and the recently revived Downpatrick Club (two teams).

The teams were composed of three members each, and were drawn in pairs on knock-out conditions Shooting was at 13 breakable discs, two inches in diameter, with time limit of 1½ minutes.

The conditions for shooting were none too good, and some of the "cracks" did not show up. Certain newcomers to the sport were prominent in this class of competition. After keenly contested matches R.U.C. "B" team (A. Holland, R. Duncan, W. Seawright) were winners of the final by beating East Belfast "C" team (J. M'Ewen, S. Roberts, W. R. M'Kibben).

EX-MODERATOR AND CONTROVERSY.

CRITICS CRITICISED

IN A BELFAST ADDRESS.

"CHASTENING EXPERIENCES."

"We are the Presbyterian Church not of the Six Counties or of the Twenty-six Counties, but the Presbyterian Church in Ireland," said Rev. Dr. John Waddell, who spoke of the chastening experiences which a moderator passes through at a complimentary dinner given in Belfast last night by prominent laymen of the Church to mark the termination of his year of office as Moderator of the General Assembly.

"Sometimes," he observed, "we are reproved by the public Press, but I am not a believer in entering into newspaper controversies."

Dr. Waddell added that he had received anonymous letters and the writer of one had recently told him that he was not to think he was the General Assembly. Spurgeon had said that "there are a good many people in the world not that I should save their souls but that they may discipline mine." He had met a good many people of that kind. (Laughter.)

There was, he proceeded, an essential harmony in the Church North, South, East and West and they never had any quarrel which was of a character to destroy friendship. Some people in the South had a bad opinion of the North and vice versa, but if they could get to know each other better they would think more highly of each other than they did at present. (Applause.)

The Church was respected by the Governments of the country. "The contact I had with the Government of Dublin was a contact which assured me that whatever their politics may be they have a regard for religion and a regard for the religion of the Presbyterian Church as well as other churches," he added.

The Northern Government from Lord Craigavon down had gone out of its way to show the respect it bears and Lord Craigavon always spoke of the Presbyterian Church as "my Church." The Ulster Premier had throughout the whole of his (Dr. Waddell's) year of office shown himself a true friend of their Church in Northern Ireland and he beleived, in spite of newspaper correspondents, that their Church was generally respected. (Applause.)

Dr. Waddell concluded by saying "My experience of people who write to newspapers in controversial subjects is that they are usually people who have not done anything for the cause they pretend to represent."

APPEAL TO RUGBY PLAYERS.

"ALTER TACTICS IN SCRUM."

An appeal to English Rugby players to alter their tactics in the scrum was made by Major-General B. A. Hill after his reelection as president at the annual general meeting of the Rugby Football Union at the Hotel Victoria, London, W.

"I think," Major-General Hill said, "that in the international matches last season we saw better football than we have seen for a good many years. Last season I hope we learned a very good lesson.

"In the 'Varsity match Cambridge got the ball nine times out of ten, and in the English-Scottish match England, I should think, also got the ball nine times out of ten from the scrum. Yet both these sides were soundly beaten. If you go on doing the same stereotyped thing your opponents soon know how to deal with it.

"We have lost the art of really good forward play. We have lost it because nobody can scrum properly if he stands on one foot or is not in the scrum at all. I hope after these lessons we will get back to good, honest forward play."

CLANDEBOYE CLUB (LADIES).

On Captain's Day at Clandeboye prizes were presented by the Lady Captain, Mrs. R. H. Dickson. There was a record entry. The competition was run on bogey points and was won by Miss Tolland; Mrs. Ferguson being runner-up. Hidden number prize was won by Miss Gordon, and hidden hole prize by Mrs. Boyd.

The ladies and friends were entertained to tea by Mrs. Dickson.

CELTIC PARK DOG RACING.

STRONG MUTTON'S GOOD WIN

AFTER GREATEST RACE ON TRACK.

Strong Mutton was given a tremendous ovation when he crossed the winning line at Celtic Park last night half a length in the lead of the Southern contender, Clonarney Town, favourite at 6 to 4, after one of the greatest races ever seen on the Belfast track.

The attendance and enthusiasm of the crowd reminded one of the days before the tariff duty came in and spoiled the competition by barring the Southern dogs and confining the event.

The Southerners, Clonarney Town and Hook Off, were strongly fancied, but Strong Mutton and Slightly Potty came in for quite strong support, in some cases for purely sentimental reasons, and a rush for Strong Mutton at the death brought his price tumbling down to 9 to 4.

Last away, the winner gave Clonarney Town, who broke in front, a start of three or four lengths, and then cut him out by taking the rails on the first turn.

The pair then raced practically level for the remainder of the journey, the Gilford dog pulling out a little bit extra close home to score decisively.

The winner's success was all the more creditable in view of the circumstances, it being generally known that he had cut a pad on a hind leg only a day or two prior to the race.

In clocking 31.34secs. the winner ran within a length of his own track record of 31.28secs.

ELTON POST BEATS SAUCY HOME.

Coming from below the line in the absence of Mount Divis in the Harmonican Stakes Elton Post, popular with fans from the Ballymena district, was made a hot favourite at 6 to 4, and led all the way to score by half a length from Saucy Home.

Miss Margaret Kerr must have blessed the fates who intervened to prevent Mount Divis taking part.

Nicotina put up an amazing performance in the Celtic Hurdle, clocking 31.05 secs., a new record for the track.

Beaten by the more fancied Chest Warmer in Dublin in 31.70secs., Nicotina completely reversed the form between the pair to score by eight lengths after a slow start.

The previous record for the distance was held by Maghereagh Major with 31.01secs.

Peacefield Tiger got the best of a scrambling start to the Bellevue Stakes, and led to the bend. Claremont Mutton and Urbanity joined him, and the Dungannon dog got the rails, and held off the late challenge of Cavan Lad to score by a length and a half.

FAVOURITE'S POOR SHOWING.

The winner was well backed, having run well to win in Dublin a couple of days previously, but the favourite, Thornton, never appeared in the race with a chance.

Publican's Pride set up the fastest figures of the season when returning 30.20secs. in the Sandown Stakes, time which is little more than a length slower than the record of Strong Mutton.

After he had steered his way round the first turn there was never any doubt about the Omagh dog winning, and considering the fast time the runner-up, British Destiny, was lucky to get as close to him as he did.

At the presentation of the cup Mr. James Nesbitt, J.P., welcomed the Lord Mayor, and spoke of his popularity among sportsmen in the city.

The Lord Mayor (Sir Crawford M'Cullagh, Bart.) expressed his pleasure at visiting Celtic Park, where he always felt at home. He said that the Trigo Cup, presented by a townsman on the occasion of his winning the supreme classic of horse racing, was the most coveted trophy in Irish greyhound racing, and congratulated the winning owner most heartily on his achievement. JOCK M'AVOY'S LEG BROKEN.

WAS THROWN FROM HORSE.

BADLY HURT SAME WAY LAST YEAR

Jock M'Avoy, the British middleweight champion, while out riding last night was thrown from his horse and his leg was broken.

He was taken to Stockport Infirmary, where a reporter was told this morning that he was "fairly comfortable."

In June of last year M'Avoy was seriously injured while horse riding, and prior to his fight with Len Harvey in March the promoter of the contest placed a ban on his favourite hobby of horse riding.

BOWLING TEST GAME

FOR INTERNATIONAL TEAM.

AN UNIMPRESSIVE EXHIBITION.

At College Park East, the well-appointed green of the Belfast Club, on Friday evening, six sets of players occupied three rinks in a trial match for the purpose of assisting the Selection Committee of the I.B.A. to choose a team to represent Ireland at the coming international tournament to be held this year on July 13, 14, and 15 at Larne.

The weather was favourable, with the turf in fine condition thanks to Keeper Hobson, and the attendance was particularly pleasing, the ditches being well patronised by enthusiasts of the game, many ladies also being present.

There were several alterations from the original team. Jones (Belfast) and Boyd (Castleton) took the places of Watt and Russell on Percy Watson's rink, while Williamson and Sloan (both of Castleton) were included in M'Alpine's quartette owing to the two Dublin men—Boyd and Cullen—being unable to travel.

Taken on the whole, the play was unimpressive, and it was apparent some of the men were upset by the occasion.

Rink 1—H. Jones, F. J. Boyd, E. Heybourn, and P. T. Watson (skip). T. Kernohan, J. K. Neave, W. Gardiner, and T. M'Crea (skip).

M'Crea got well away at the start, but though six shots separated the rinks at fifteen ends, Watson pulled up well, and only finished three down—22-19.

The Cavehill skip possibly missed his lead, for Jones could not be expected to be up to international class in a position to which he is unaccustomed. Boyd was a very good second, playing some useful shots when the head was badly against him. Heyburn, a quiet type of player, performed admirably. He is one likely to do well in an international match. Watson was very effective, and was probably unlucky in losing one or two ends.

A VERY FORCEFUL GAME.

Kernohan played an average game, but does not appear to be as good as he was. Neave, playing in a strange position, was by no means a failure. Both Gardiner and M'Crea played a very forceful game, driving on several occasions when a draw appeared to be a much better shot. However, they got most of their drives, but this sort of thing may not pay them so well when meeting the experts of the other countries on the Larne green.

Rink 2—W. J. Lawther, J. M'Cutcheon, J. Wilkin, and G. Watson (skip). J. S. O'Neill, A. P. Hunter, J. Thompson, and C. Clawson (skip).

Both the leads—Lawther and O'Neill—were having their baptisms of this type of game, and did fairly well under the circumstances. M'Cutcheon and Hunter were well matched, with the odds slightly on the Larne man. Wilkin played a useful game. He drew several fine shots with the head badly against him, and seems assured of his place on the Irish international team for many years to come. Thompson was useful at times. George Watson and Clawson were well matched, but the latter would be well advised to curb his penchant for driving, as this is likely to prove very expensive if over indulged in. Calwson won by one shot—17-16.

Rink 3—J. Wilson, W. Williamson, W. Sloan, and A. M'Alpine (skip). C. Allen, W. Scott, R. Miller, and C. Curran (skip).

Allen started badly, but improved towards the finish. He certainly is worth another trial. Wilson was rather in and out. Williamson was better than Scott, who played a rather disappointing game. He is a grand bowler, and should do well at Larne, as he has the right temperament for a big occasion. Miller performed much better than Sloan, and on last night's display should be assured of his place on the team. Curran did very well in his first venture in these games against a doughty opponent. In the end, however, M'Alpine's greater experience told. The Castleton man was behind 3 shots at fifteen ends, but scoring 4-1 on the last stretch finished level at 13 shots all.

M'Alpine is now almost in the veteran stage so far as international bowls are concerned, but he showed last night that his hand had lost none of its cunning, and the manner in which he took his rink out of one or two difficult situations was really masterly.

The London Diary of an Ulsterwoman

A Novel Suit in Floral Stripes

MRS. St. John Ervine and Dr. Helen Waddell are taking a keen interest in the scheme of a London society to erect blocks of flats which can be let for under 10s a week to women whose earnings are not more than £2 a week. The scheme is a necessary one. It has come into being as an off-shoot of the Over Thirty Association, who have found their social work consistently checked by the fact that a large number of women never rise beyond the £2 a week level; that they pay often half their wages for what is a very miserable room, and that when they are out of work they have not a penny saved.

Association's Aim.

If they can save on rent they will be able to put something by for the proverbial rainy day, but what is even more important is the fact that the association is aiming to give them really pleasant, live and practical rooms—rooms which they will be proud to call their homes, and rooms in which they will be able to cook and to rest. Most of the women who will occupy the rooms have indulged in such fancies, but few of them ever dreamed their secret yearnings would be realised.

Mr. St. John Ervine still remains one of the principal magnets of London theatregoers. His two plays, "Robert's Wife" and "People of Our Class," are playing to capacity houses—a rare thing these days. He knows his job as a playwright, and in his plays there is more "meat" than in most of our contemporary dramatists' work. A North of Ireland actress, who is appearing in another strong play in Cathleen Nesbitt, who plays the part of a pacifist in "Trumpeter, Play," ✓ play which puts forward clearly and with understanding the views of young Germans and young English people about war, patriotism, and sacrifice.

A Fine Performance.

Miss Nesbitt is in the play arrested by the German police for having carried on work of a pacifist nature, and her brother, who is a high official in Germany, does nothing to save her, holding the belief that the needs of the country must count more than personal desires. She gives a fine performance in a play which, perhaps more than most others, does help us to understand the differences in national temperament.

"When I Was Young," the book edited by the Countess of Oxford, and to which the Marchioness of Londonderry has contributed a chapter, will be published on Monday. In honour of its publication, that very enterprising young person, Miss Christina Foyle, is giving a lunch next week, and several of the contributors have promised to attend and speak. Miss Foyle tells me that the lunch will, in all probability, be one of the most amusing she has organised, and that the speeches, which will be many, should be interesting.

I met in town this week an Ulsterwoman who used to take a prominent part in the musical life of the Province, and who is now taking a prominent part in the artistic life of London. She is Mrs. John Montgomery, who under the name of Mrs. "Monte Rochelle" has been doing some extremely good work. Mrs. Montgomery is a member of the Ulster family, and a sister-in-law of Mrs. Johnstone Montgomery, of Carrickfergus, who, I believe, is also an artist. "Monté Rochelle" exhibited for the first time at the Belfast Art Society's show in 1928. She told me she received much encouragement from Mr. Eyre Macklin, whose work is well known in Belfast.

Art versus Music.

So much struck by her promise was he that Mr. Macklin persuaded her husband to let her go to Paris to study, and there she put in many months practising her craft. Amongst the paintings I saw at her Hampstead studio were studies of Gloria, the beautiful mannequin who is so fond of Belfast, Tallulah Bankhead, and one of the late Lilian Bayliss, which she was commissioned to do by members of the Vic Wells company.

"Monté Rochelle" works very quickly, and she takes her art seriously. Her talents lay hidden for many years. Music was her first love, and she never dreamed in her early Belfast days that she would abandon the piano for the easel and brush. She is thoroughly happy with her second love, though she still retains a great fondness for music. While in Belfast she won a prize for window dressing, the shop window dressed being that of her husband in Donegall Street.

LAUGH and GROW FAT

A MEAL TIME MAXIM

By KINDERGARTEN

"JOHN simply won't eat his food; he is very trouble-some at meal times."

A great deal has been written about the injurious effects of forcing children to eat certain foods because they are "good for them." A great deal more might also be written about the disastrous effects upon health and stamina which result from not eating what is good for them! A nice problem! Children must not be forced to eat, yet children must eat if they are to grow strong and healthy.

Actually, this food problem is not so complicated as it seems. The average child likes his food. What is really required is a great deal of common sense. I am afraid that mothers and nurses are greatly to blame for food faddiness.

A little child is extremely open to suggestion. His life is greatly affected by the attitude of the people by whom he is surrounded. That is why it is important for children to live in a happy, healthy atmosphere. They are quick to sense sorrow, joy or strife in the grown-ups around them.

As regards this matter of food, it is well to avoid over-anxiety. Do not allow the child to see how eager you are that he shall eat some particular food.

"EAT your greens, John," says mother, drawing a distinction between the "greens" and the rest of the food.

Subconsciously, John is suspicious. Mother didn't think that he would want to eat the greens. What is the matter with them, anyway? He prods them half-heartedly, and pushes them to one side of his plate. Further exhortations from his mother not to leave the greens only produce a determined look on John's face and a mumbled "Don't like it."

Similar tactics on mother's part with regard to other foods will soon add to the list of foods that John "doesn't like." All this is most unnecessary. Mother is actually putting the idea that he will not like certain foodstuffs into John's head. If she were merely to set his food before him, without making any remark, better results would be obtained. At least, the child would be given a chance to make up his own mind as to whether or not he liked that particular food.

Then there is Mary. Her mother is inclined to fuss over everything, especially about Mary's food. She is over-anxious, and shows it only too plainly. Mary fusses now about the food. She has caught the fussing habit.

"EAT your pudding, darling, to please mummy," says Mary's parent.

Mary is feeling in a contented mood, she eats it up, feeling a glow of satisfaction about "pleasing mummy." If Mary is out of temper, however, or angry with mummy, she revenges herself by not eating the pudding—even if she likes it very much.

Children will punish themselves rather than be defeated. And refusing to eat is, as Mary has long ago discovered, a splendid way to punish mother. I am afraid I have not much sympathy for Mary's mother. She has simply made a rod for her own back. She should never have told Mary to eat something to please her or anyone else.

We do not eat to please others. We eat because we are hungry and require food. If Mary is hungry she will eat. If she isn't hungry, and is only eating to please Mummy, then she is hurting herself inside! The fact is, Mary, and John too, are both having far too much attention. A little wholesome neglect would do them good. Leave them alone. They will eat if hungry. If they are not hungry it is unwise to urge them to eat.

'AS I said before, common sense is needed. There are, undoubtedly, a few foods which we as adults simply cannot face eating. So it is with children. But watch carefully, saying nothing, and you will soon discover which foods are constantly rejected, or followed by ill effects. Apart from these, children should not be encouraged to be finicky.

In this connection it is worth noting that children love to imitate, and do so unconsciously. If they have meals with Mummy and Daddy, and their parents eating a little of everything, they will want to do the same. John will demand more parsnip "same as Daddy."

There is another aspect to be considered. We do not want to teach our children to give in to every difficulty. We want to help them to surmount obstacles, to have courage. The little boy who learns to tackle his food in a sporting way has a much better start in life than the frail little child who is finicky and pernickety. If meals are taken normally and without fuss and new foods are introduced in very small quantities until a taste for them is acquired, food difficulties should not arise.

"Laugh and grow fat" may sound well, but in practice a solid diet is required to build sturdy limbs and strong bodies.

CARE of the TEETH

By THE MATRON

IN days past, the only ill popularly associated with teeth was an occasional bean ache, and even that, disagreeable though it sometimes was, could often be cured simply by an extraction.

Little care or thought, therefore, was bestowed upon teeth. But the modern generation is somewhat more enlightened, and the effect that the condition of the teeth can have upon the general health of an individual is now widely realised.

Even so, there still exists considerable indifference in this matter, and it is, perhaps, only a comparative few who take really thorough-going care of their teeth. Prevention, though it may take time and trouble, is always better than cure, which invariably takes much more of both.

Pyorrhœa is one of the gravest consequences of neglected teeth, but if this does not develop there is plenty of other harm that can be done. A decayed tooth does not conserve its poison, but diffuses it throughout the system. It acts therefore as a constant accomplice to disease. Rheumatism is one of the most common complaints fostered by bad teeth, and even if no positive illness results, the health never fails to suffer in some respects. Many people, puzzled by a continual feeling of being off colour, owe this disagreeable state to the condition of their teeth.

A PART, however, from being a source of poison, decayed teeth are unable to perform properly their special function, which is the thorough mastication of food. The ultimate outcome is reduced nutrition, for food which has been insufficiently masticated is difficult to digest, and consequently is only partially assimilated.

The thorough cleansing of the mouth and teeth, therefore, is obviously of the utmost importance. The teeth should be vigorously scrubbed with a stiff brush and paste or powder every night and morning, particularly night. A mouth wash with some mild antiseptic should follow, for the brushing does not always avail to cleanse the crevices of the teeth properly.

Diet also affects the condition of the teeth in many ways. It should always include a proportion of food which will provide exercise for the jaws, particularly in the case of children, whose jaws can only be properly developed by dint of much chewing.

Decay of the teeth, again, depends in some measure upon a person's condition of health. The teeth of a healthy individual can resist decay better than those of an unhealthy one. Susceptibility to decay is also sometimes inherited.

The thing to be borne in mind is that the slightest sign of decay should be stubbornly contested. Tolerated, it may make rapid headway, and become very much harder to restrain.

Nor can the preservation of teeth begin too soon. Children should, at an early age, be trained in teeth-cleaning habits, so that decay is warded off from the very outset.

Line Your Own Cutlery Drawer

If you have not a baize-lined drawer in your kitchen dresser you can easily line one yourself. It provides a handy place for cutlery and silver. The lining is quite satisfactory if made of flannel but it is possible to buy baize by the yard if you prefer it. When cutting the lining fit it inside the drawer, securing it in place with drawing pins and neatening the edges by turning them in. Now take it out, cut away any excess material for the corners, machine or sew strongly together, and put it back, keeping it firm with drawing pins, which are easily removed when the lining has to be washed.

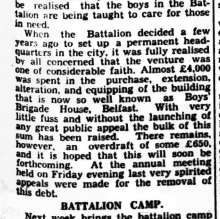

NEW KIND OF PLEATING.

In addition to the ordinary pleating with which we are familiar, there is a new type which has the effect of pleats, the skirts being made of separate strips of material stitched or otherwise secured at the folds. They fit the hips trimly, and make up smartly in many materials including tweed. The pleats remain permanent throughout the life of the garment.

WHITE EMBROIDERIES.

Another very "fetching" pseudo-rustic outfit has a dress made of black silk—again with very full skirt. There is a design of white marguerites embroidered around the high neckline, and down the front of the skirt. The hat worn with it is of the bonnet type, worn demurely upon the back of the head, the brim being edged with white kilted frilling.

Dresses of net, printed in a large checked design are also popular just now.

BELFAST BATTALION STRENGTH

NOW OVER 5,400.

GRATIFYING STATISTICS.

GANAWAY DAYS AHEAD.

The statistics for the Belfast Battalion for session 1937-38 are now complete, and make very interesting reading. They reveal that our present position is most gratifying. Churches are more and more realising the value of a Boys' Brigade company, and in the session ended May 31, three new companies were enrolled. There are now in the Battalion 480 officers, an increase of 21 over the previous session, 44 bandmasters, an increase of 27; 121 warrant officers, an increase of 8; 199 staff-sergeants, an increase of 23; and 3,671 boys, an increase of 162. Total strength in the Battalion 5,415, an increase of 241.

In the Life Boys no fewer than six new teams were enrolled, and in addition to leaders who are actually also engaged in B.B., there are 483 leaders doing Life Boy work only, an increase of 47 over last session, the total Life Boy increase being 69. The Belfast Battalion strength in the senior and junior organisations is now 6,185, a total increase of 310.

Interesting details from the report are that in the Battalion there are now 32 bands with a membership of 485, these being bugle, trumpet, pipe, flute, and silver. There are 21 club rooms, 36 cricket clubs and 55 football clubs.

It is good to note that companies still continue to have thought for other people. During the session £200 17s 1d was contributed by companies for Overseas Missions, and £188 6s 6d for other religious or charitable purposes. When it is remembered that this money is actually contributed by the companies and does not include much bigger amounts raised by other means, it will be realised that the boys in the Battalion are being taught to care for those in need.

When the Battalion decided a few years ago to set up a permanent headquarters in the city, it was fully realised by all concerned that the venture was one of considerable faith. Almost £4,000 was spent in the purchase, extension, alteration, and equipping of the building that is now so well known as Boys' Brigade House, Belfast. With very little fuss and without the launching of any great public appeal the bulk of this sum has been raised. There remains, however, an overdraft of some £650, and it is hoped that this will soon be forthcoming. At the annual meeting held on Friday evening last very spirited appeals were made for the removal of this debt.

BATTALION CAMP.

Next week brings the battalion camp a stage nearer. On Wednesday night a meeting of all officers going to camp will be held in Boys' Brigade House, and on Friday night a meeting of all boys and staff-sergeants. This latter meeting is a most exciting one, as considerable latitude is given to enable boys and officers to get to know each other. This and the excitement of camp anticipation naturally provide a steady buzz of talk amongst the huge crowd of boys present. However, the C.O.'s camp bell is on the platform and when he requires order for any announcement it is speedily forthcoming.

The Battalion is to assemble in Scrabo Street on Friday morning, July 8, at 8-30, and will leave by train for Donaghadee at 9-15. On arrival there companies will be formed again and the Battalion will march through Donaghadee to the Millisle Road, where buses will be waiting. Those unfortunates who cannot get away on Friday morning are advised to travel to Donaghadee either by the 6-18 train on Friday evening or the 2-15 on Saturday. Both these trains will be met.

Some years ago a splendid address was given at the camp drumhead service by Rev. J. H. Davey, B.A., B.D., who made a great appeal to all campers. Since then Mr. Davey has been abroad as a missionary in Cambay, India, but is now home on furlough, and has agreed to speak at the drumhead service this year.

The big event in camp is the inspection, when huge crowds are attracted to Ganaway. A record number is expected this year, as inspection day, July 13, is a holiday, when most people will be free. An interesting change will be a clerical inspecting officer—our old friend the Primate of All Ireland. Since, however, his Grace is a B.B. officer of long experience, we must not assume his inspection will be a mere matter of form. Our friends have got into the habit of describing inspection day as "visitors' day." It is, of course, the occasion that attracts most people to camp, but it should be remembered that every day during Camp is "Visitors' Day," and that friends of the boys are always welcome.

The fancy dress parade is now an annual feature and will be repeated this year on the evening of July 12. As usual, prizes will be awarded for the most effective costumes in various sections. One of the most popular features of camp is the sing-song. Mr. Wm. Tweedie has been good enough to agree to act as organiser for this year's event, which will be held on Thursday evening, July 14.

COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.

There is no more important camp department than the commissariat. When it is said that Messrs. Craig and Crawford will be in charge again, all ranks will be satisfied that the food will be of the best and most plentiful. This year they will have the further assistance of Mr. E. J. Garrett, jun., B.A., whose father, now hon. battalion treasurer, was one of the earliest commissariat officers in the Battalion. Mr. Garrett will be sure of a hearty welcome, both on account of the honoured name he bears and of his own personality and sterling worth.

Once again Rev. Wm. Chestnutt, M.A., will be camp chaplain. The religious exercises at Ganaway make a strong appeal to the boys, simply because they are prepared specially for them by a man who knows the boys' needs, and who at camp shows deep interest in every department.

Dr. Warnock will again be hon. medical officer and probably again the inspirer—behind the scenes—of much of the camp fun. He will have with him in the hospital tent Mr. C. Turner, a stalwart who can be relied on in any emergency. Anyone who has visited our camp will realise that one of the hardest worked men is the canteen officer. This year again Mr. A. H. M'Roberts, B.A., will be in charge, and amongst his chief assistants will be Mr. Wm. Hull, well known to all visitors to B.B. House. Mr. Norman Rea will again take charge of our money. We take our camp bank as a matter of course, but it is always an amazing thing to visitors to see the most efficient and simple system set up for boys to deposit pocket money and withdraw it in small amounts as required. The treasurer's job, of course, does not end there, as he is responsible for the collecting of all payments and the paying of all accounts.

It may be a disappointment to many campers that the newspaper known for so long as "The Ganaway Lyre" will not appear with its accustomed regularity. There will, however, be two issues, and it is hoped they will compensate in quality for their infrequent appearance. Mr. Hugh Norman will be responsible for them, and Mr. F. J. Parkinson will act as Press correspondent.

FROM THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

The First East Cowes Company will be joined by members of the First Ryde Company on their trip to Ulster next month. The officers and boys will leave at 12-30 p.m. on July 7 and are due in Belfast at 7 a.m. the following day. A contingent of 30 will make the long journey, which we hope will prove a very pleasant one. The Isle of Wight visitors will be well compensated by a memorable happy holiday and a real Irish welcome and good B.B. comradeship. The 44th Belfast Company (Christ Church) are arranging to entertain them on arrival in Belfast.

The Boys' Brigade Cricket League continues to provide keen sporting rivalry. A splendid entry of 20 clubs has been received for the knock-out competition. We hope many pleasant evenings will be spent with "the bat" during the remainder of the season.

ALLAM'S WEEKLY PIGS SALE.

Yesterday Messrs. Allam, Ltd., held their weekly sale of fat sows and boars in the Oxford Mart, Oxford Street, Belfast.

Buyers were present in full strength, but the drop in cross-Channel markets, due to the warmer weather, resulted in a slower demand. Top quality York sows ranged from 37s to 40s per live cwt., second quality 34s to 36s, soft and rougher sorts sold under these rates. The highest price recorded for sows was £10 10s and for boars £3 15s.

BRITISH MATERNITY SERVICES PLAN.

'PROFESSIONAL TEAMWORK'

PROPOSALS BY B.M.A. AND T.U.C.

One person (a qualified medical practitioner) to have continuous responsibility throughout the period of maternity.

Every required help to be at the service of any prospective mother irrespective of her social status.

A medical advisory committee for every local authority area to give advice and recommendations on matters of a professional character.

These are some of the proposals in a scheme for a national maternity service which has been framed by the joint committee of the British Medical Association and the Trades Congress General Council.

Pointing out that the provision of a national maternity scheme on lines which would secure the best results and widest co-operation from all interested bodies is an important problem of sociology the joint committee state that maternal mortality on which public opinion has been stimulated should be regarded not as an isolated question but as part of the larger issue of an adequate national maternity service.

The basic principles governing a national maternity service should be uniformity, continuity, equality and co-operation. "In any comprehensive national maternity scheme," the committee state, "there should be uniformity in regard not only to medical facilities and arrangements but also administration. The maternity scheme whilst generally uniform should allow for local modification where local circumstances require it. Every local authority should be obliged to submit a scheme in accordance with uniform requirements to the Central Government department for its approval."

On the subject of continuity, the report recommend—"That the main responsibility for the conduct of maternity in each case should be throughout on the qualified medical practitioner, preferably one with an intimate knowledge of the expectant mother's bodily health history and family conditions. Any registered medical practitioner should have the right to have his name enrolled on any list drawn up for this purpose under the scheme. The prospective mother should exercise her own choice of doctor from amongst those whose names are on this list. A midwife or maternity nurse of the mother's own choice should also be associated in each case."

It is proposed in addition to this that there should be placed at the practitioner's disposal at every stage of maternity facilities for the obtaining of (a) consultative advice and help either at a clinic or at the home of the patient, including an emergency obstetrical unit if required; (b) further professional help, as, for example, for the administration of anæsthetics; (c) admission to hospital when required, including an ambulance service, and (d) necessary equipment and home helps.

The committee point out that although the doctor need not personally be present at all stages of a normal confinement, the responsibility for the proper handling of the case throughout devolved upon him.

SATURDAY, JUNE 25, 1938.

WE STAND APART.

TO-DAY Dr. Douglas Hyde was installed in Dublin Castle as President of Eire. Speaking in the name of the vast majority of Loyalists in Northern Ireland, we are constrained to say that it is impossible to join in the congratulations offered to the holder of the office. The President made the declaration prescribed by the new Constitution which contains no expression of allegiance to the King. Although Eire is nominally still part of the British Empire, no mention was made of that fact during the proceedings, and although Dublin streets had been lavishly decorated for the occasion, the Union Jack was not to be seen there. In no other Dominion which forms a part of the British Commonwealth of Nations would such a scene be witnessed. It is claimed that a new era of friendship between Great Britain and Ireland has been inaugurated, but, so far, there is no tangible evidence of it on the part of those who speak for Eire. The smooth words of the "Taoiseach" or Prime Minister, are belied by the blunt outbursts of his second in command, the Tanaiste bearer of a title well known in the old tribal days in Ireland. In this respect it seems that the feeling of the separatists is better expressed by Mr. O'Kelly than by Mr. De Valera. The view they hold is that the British Government's facile generosity has led it to make a complete surrender to all the claims of the Irish Republicans. Henceforth Eire will be "in" the British Empire, but not "of" it, enjoying all the privileges of membership with none of the liabilities.

Whether knowingly or not Dr. Hyde has lent his name to be used for the completion of the work of separation. That he will be able to exercise effective powers in the control of the State is most unlikely, whatever nominal authority has been bestowed upon him by the Constitution. He is, however, a useful figurehead in setting up the framework of a republic. This may be brought into existence at any moment by clever opportunists and astute wirepullers, who have nothing to learn in regard to political manoeuvres. They have been able, for example, to manipulate the Proportional Representation system of election for their purpose by the re-division of constituencies, adapting the size so as to make it easier to gain majorities. By their employment of methods modelled on those originating across the Atlantic they have out-generalled the slower-witted leaders of the Cosgrave party. The result is seen to-day in the ceremonial installation of a "President." This title has been used by the heads of successive Free State Governments from the beginning in a way not known elsewhere in the British Empire. As "Presidents of the Executive Council" Mr. Cosgrave and Mr. De Valera were respectively called "President" on all occasions. The British Administration contains Presidents of the Board of Trade and of the Board of Education, but we do not speak of "President Stanley" or "President Earl Stanhope." The motive believed to be behind the use of the word was obviously the desire to go as far as possible towards the creation of a Republic not owning the authority of the British Crown. To-day's ceremony in whatever way it may be interpreted, is a further step in the direction in which the former Free State has been proceeding ever since 1922, without interruption. A Dublin newspaper formerly considered an advocate of the cause of Unionism remarks in this connection "The yoke of England has been shaken from the Irish neck. To-day two sovereign and independent nations confront each other." It consoles its readers with the hope that "the bond of mutual expediency" will serve as a permanent link of Great Britain and Ireland. To this it may be replied that it is possible to exchange a "yoke" to which purely sentimental objections are made by a much more onerous one, the grinding rule of an intolerant local dictatorship. Moreover, a friendship based on expediency alone stands on very unstable foundations. Far from being an occasion of rejoicing, to-day's Dublin event creates in us a feeling of melancholy foreboding as to the future of Eire under its new Constitution.

A Best Seller

by Dr. A. D. Belden

*

JUST over 100 years ago the great rationalist, Tom Paine, was so confident of the victory of his cause that he committed himself to the verdict, "In 100 years not a Bible will be printed." During the last twelve months something like 11,000,000 copies of the Bible have been printed and distributed, and in the last 100 years something like 80 Bible Societies, whose sole purpose it is to print and circulate the Bible, have come into being. In spite of all the modern revolt from organised Christianity the Bible is still the world's best seller.

Thoughts for the Times

It has been a matter of great interest to me to discover how many people with some aspiration to decent culture, who are right outside what we would call the Christian public, are nevertheless constant readers of the Bible and rejoice in it, not merely for its literary beauty, but for its moral inspiration and its spiritual comfort. The overwhelming success of Heinemann's Bible in modern literary form, which became at once a best seller, is an indication of the strength of this type of public. There is not the slightest doubt that this Book of Books has played a major part in shaping the destinies of the English-speaking people and in the people there is a deep instinctive appreciation of the fact.

Four hundred years ago Tyndale's prayer, "O Lord, open the eyes of the King of England," uttered just before he was strangled and burnt, was no other crime than the provision of the Bible in English for his fellow-countrymen, was dramatically answered. Henry VIII. issued the famous order on June 17, 1538, that the incumbent of every parish church should

> "provyde one boke of the whole Bible of the largest volume, in Englyshe, and the same sett up in some convenyent place within the said churche that ye have cure of, whereof your parishioners may most commodiously resort to the same and rede it."

*

NOT only did the English people gladly everywhere to hear this Book read, but before long, especially after the authorised version of James I., there was keen learning to read in order to read the Scriptures, and within the next century England became the land of a Book, and the teaching of that Book steadily wove itself deeply into the English character, raising the standard of moral behaviour everywhere. Out of it marched steadily the liberties, religious, intellectual, civic, and political, that we enjoy to-day. And thus the Book underlies the whole structure of modern democracy. The conjunction of the re-discovery of the Bible by Luther and its translation into English by such men as Miles Coverdale and William Tyndale, with the invention of the printing press, was a master stroke of Providence. So long as these two abide in the earth, the Bible and the printing press, liberty will never fail to challenge tyranny.

In answering the question, "Is the Bible the Word of God?" we must not reply "Because it claims to be so," since the Koran makes the same claim. The authority of the Scriptures can be proved only by their actual effect upon the human mind. The Books of the Old Testament proved their moral and religious value in this practical way for seven centuries before they were gathered into a canon of sacred authority. Similarly the Books of the New Testament proved their value among Christians for nearly 400 years before they were set aside into a collection or canon of Divine authority. In other words, the Church has only declared those books to be most inspired with the Spirit of God which it has found in its own experience to be actually most inspiring. It remains for us all to test personally the truth of that. The best way of celebrating the English Bible is to read it.

THE KING'S VISIT TO LORD'S.

SETS A BOWLER FASHION.

LONDON, Saturday.

The King was the only person at Lord's yesterday, when loyalties were running high, who ex-officio was impartial—except the umpires. He was spared, however, any undue strain on his neutrality. During the first hour he watched the game neither side could be said to be on top. No "King's wicket" fell in that time to implement the Lord's joke about the usual coincidence of a Royal visit with a bateman getting out. The visit was unannounced. It was the unexpected trek of Walden and Smith, the umpires, after the lunch interval from the wicket towards the pavilion which caused the experts to guess that something was in the wind. The replacing of the Union Jack by the Royal Standard explained what it was. Lord Baldwin, leaning rather heavily on his stick, functioned publicly for the first time as president of the M.C.C. when he accompanied the King on the ground. I shall be interested to see whether a fashion which the King set yesterday will be followed at Lord's. He was wearing a bowler.—"Peterborough" in the Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

This was Ulster's Worst Flood

by W.P.

PAMPHLETS in the British Museum written by "persons of probity" and printed in London describe a storm which occurred on Saturday, June 26, 1680, and caused heavy loss of life and destruction of property in the counties of Derry and Tyrone.

A letter written in Londonderry states that "about five in the afternoon happened a great thunder with hail and rain. It hath not only tore up a mountain of near 300 acres but the cloud breaking thereon hath carried all the surface of the earth in that compass into all the rivers round about, but withal hath carried away several houses and families, insomuch that of men, women and children already above 30 corps are found and many more is believed to be lost.

"Of a sudden the waters rise betwixt the mountain 14 fathoms high; on that part where the mountain was, only one woman left alive to give account of the dreadfulness thereof, which she saith was as well by hailstones of an incredible bignest as by the vast cloud coming down at once, that none but she, and that by a wonderful providence, could escape in that place, and had it been in the night many hundred persons had been destroyed as well as their houses, and great numbers of cattle drowned and killed.

"ALL fish for several miles up the river are destroyed by the blackness and muddiness of the water which the surface of the mountain made. Of salmon alone 700 or 800 found already dead on the shore, of eels and all other small freshwater fish infinite numbers destroyed, that 'tis nor cannot be believed in those rivers one fish is left alive."

Letters from Limavady say: "The thunderclap forced the bowels of a great mountain belonging to one Glaine Hamilton after which ensued the fall of a prodigious cloud which, entering the cavities of the said mountain made by the thunder, its weight bore the greatest part of the mountain before it which made such a deluge of puddle that that part of it which fell into Glenally water that runs towards Newton Stewart drowned 19 persons in their houses, turned the whole valley for eight or nine miles in length that was meadow and green into a desart of durt a foot thick and hath killed all the fish in the river for 20 miles in length. The other half of the cloud fell into the Row water (Roe) that runs through the county of Londonderry, has drowned 21 persons and forced away the stone bridge at Limavady.

"THE thunder and rain continued for three hours incessantly. The river swelled suddenly and did so overflow all banks that I never see so great a flood, and coming down so impetuously it brought with it an infinite deal of timber sticks, straw and rubbish which gathering together at the sides of our new bridge and having no vent it overthrew and not one stick left and so the prettiest bridge in Ireland is lost.

"I understand since that the thunder began above Dungiven and there a thunderbolt fell upon a hill and tore it down with the mingling with the rain which rather fell like a great spout it came tumbling upon a house belonging to Avery of Cahan, the father of Chan O Cahan, the Tory, and in a moment overthrew it and carried all away with it and Avery and his wife and five children and four friends were drowned with all their cows sheep and horses and among them a child in a cradle, which cradle with many other household goods and timber of houses did help to choak and overthrow our bridge.

"A boy told me he saw a thunderbolt fall which with great flames and flashes tore the earth that all the day after none could go near that place for the smell of brimstone. He says there fell also hailstones of a strange size and shape, some like pieces of candle, some like great buttons with sharp points.

"WITHIN a few miles of that place 18 persons were found drowned in one heap and several about Newton Stewart, but the mischief is not all known. After this it is a small thing to tell you that all the meadows about this town are spoiled and all the corn from here to the river's mouth, and what is wonderful, about Derry and Colerain nothing but an ordinary shower, at Maherae (Maghera) and thereabouts clear weather."

In a letter from Newtownstewart the writer, after describing the storm, says: "My curiosity took me to the place where this new kind of deluge began and truly I was amazed to see a mountain torn in ten several places and all the low ground by the river for ten miles together covered with the ruins, the corn fields buried and people grouping in the mud and earth for the bodies of their friends and of their cattle. I cannot yet learn exactly how many have perished but by the account that is given here are lost in several places fifty souls and an abundance of cattle."

The story of an Ulster Bishop and the bequest in his will that appears to have been forgotten for 284 years. Hugh Alexander Boyd, Hon. A Famous Scientist's Belfast Boyhood

by William Moore

LORD Kelvin was born on June 26, 1824, in College Square East, Belfast. His father, James Thomson, was the son of a farmer near Ballynahinch, and the farm, "Annaghmore," remained in the Thomson family until 1847.

When James Thomson was appointed teacher of arithmetic and geography in the newly-established Royal Belfast Academical Institution he built two houses in College Square East. It was in one of these that his son William was born, who was destined to become one of the greatest scientists of the nineteenth century.

Mrs. Elizabeth King, Lord Kelvin's sister, nas put on record some very interesting incidents of the early life in the house in College Square East, incidents which will appeal to Belfast readers familiar with the district.

*

FOR instance, on the day Lord Kelvin was born, Mrs. King was out with her nurse gathering flowers in the meadows around the house. She was shown the baby when she came in, and was asked to keep very quiet.

Later, as the child grew, Mrs. King recalls, "How pretty he was, and how good." He must have been a handsome child, for when he was two years old an artist called Warrington asked for permission to paint the future Lord Kelvin as an angel. The child was dressed in a white frock with blue ribbons, and his nurse, impressed with the importance of the occasion, bought a pair of blue shoes and white silk socks. To her disappointment, the artist removed the shoes and painted the "angel" in his little bare feet.

Another incident recalled by Lord Kelvin's sister was when he was two years old he was found one day sitting before a mirror saying to himself, "Pitty b'ue eyes Willie Thomson's got."

This nurse, "Sally," was an important person in the Thomson household. She used to tell the children fairy tales and stories of Irish history. Her favourite historical subjects were incidents of the Siege of Derry and the Battle of the Boyne.

"Sally" took the children, including William, for walks on the "willowy banks of the Black Staff." On these walks they saw milkmaids busy with their pails and the cows wading about the long grass "spangled with buttercups." In the year 1910, Mrs. King regrets, "those lovely meadows are all built over now, and bustling crowds hurry along the streets."

Lord Kelvin's first birthday was spent in Scotland, where the Thomson family had gone for holidays. Next year they all went to a thatched cottage some miles beyond Holywood, where they enjoyed "rambles on the hills, gathering shells on the sands, and blackberries among the rocks." In the evenings "Willie" sat on his father's knee to watch him spinning half-crowns on the mahogany table.

*

NEXT year the holidays were spent at Bangor in a house opposite the quay. The Thomson children spent a great deal of their time collecting shells on the Bangor seashore, "of which a considerable variety were to be found."

The famous Dr. Chalmers visited the family when Lord Kelvin was about three years old. On his departure, he gave sixpence to the children to buy just whatever they wished. "Willie" voted for rosy-cheeked apples, and "Sally" took him to the Belfast market to buy them.

When the future Lord Kelvin was four years old, he began to take part in the lessons his father gave daily to his children. "From the very first," wrote Mrs. King, "he showed the wonderful mental capacity with which he was endowed."

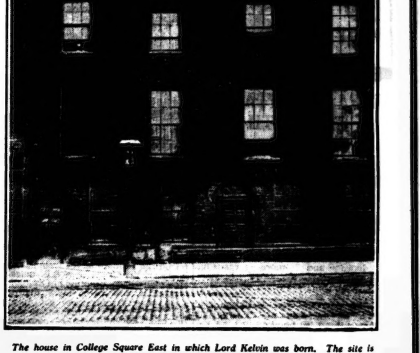

The summer of 1828 was spent at Donaghadee. "The back of the house was towards the sea, with no road between, and in front there was a beautiful lawn laid out with flower beds," says Mrs. King.

*

IT was not until the winter of 1830 that "Willie" was sent to classes in his father's school across the road for an hour or two every day, but the home tuition was continued. "Willie" was always a great pet with his father," wrote his sister, "on account of his wonderful quickness of apprehension." In 1831 "Willie" got a first prize for Latin, which was presented by the Common Hall of "Inst." On the day of the prize-giving, Mrs. King insisted upon "Willie" looking very nice and washed him herself, much to his indignation.

The following year the Thomson family moved to Glasgow, and Lord Kelvin's boyhood days at Belfast were over.

Such is a brief account of the happy boyhood of one of the most brilliant scientists of the 19th century. Lord Kelvin, after being made Chancellor of Glasgow University in 1904, died on December 17, 1907, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Uncommon Sense

Self-Discipline—By JOHN BLAKE.

I KNOW a writer who is very successful. He is in the enviable position of having his writings sought after by magazines and publishers. I asked him how he happened to become a writer.

"It was a matter of self-discipline," he said. "All my life I wanted to write. At least I thought I did. I told myself I did. But it wasn't until I learned self-discipline that I became one."

* * *

I asked for particulars.

"I had a pretty fair job with a publishing house," he continued. "But I let it go at that for years. After work was over I was glad to relax. I talked about the books I was going to write. But it was just talk.

"One day I got tired of just thinking about it—dreaming about it. I decided to do something about it.

* * *

"I set myself a little task. I decided to get up in the morning half an hour earlier and write. It was hard going at first. But I managed to do it for a month. Then I increased the task to an hour. I kept at it, increasing the discipline to an hour extra after work, and so on.

"After my first story was accepted I increased the time still more. I sold more stories and continued writing until I got in a position to leave my job and spend all my time writing.

"All that wasn't so hard. It was that first half-hour from my sleep in the morning that took the effort. Learning that self-discipline made me a writer."

* * *

That is real self-discipline.

And that's one way to accomplish it. One of the best ways of strengthening the will power is to set yourself some little task and live up to it. Half an hour a day devoted to any occupation can bring big returns.

Living up to a self-imposed task can teach a man much. It can prepare him for larger tasks—greater works.

A man who has learned to conquer himself can do many things which will be a surprise to him. He can develop talents which he may not know he has.

* * *

Not every one can become a highly successful writer. But everyone has potentialities which our self-discipline can bring out. Only the man who has learned that lesson has any idea of what he is capable.

It is through self-discipline that you learn to bring the whole force of your personality to bear on a single task. Only the man who controls himself can put everything he has into his work.

* * *

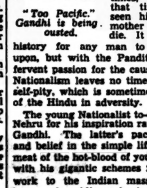

And such a man—the man who is master of himself—is the one who does things best, no matter what occupation he follows.

A half-hour extra a day to self-mastery.

Try it.

Gandhi's Successor Oft Jailed Barrister.

LONDON, Saturday.

"Too Pacific." Gandhi is being ousted.

PANDIT Jawaharlal Nehru is again in London. It is surprising how often England has seen him, as his time in India has been cheapened by repeated terms of imprisonment, leaving only short periods of liberty in which to urge the cause he has suffered for so much.

Since 1921 he has been arrested seven times, and during that time he has been his father's mother and wife die. It is a gloomy history for any man to look back upon, but with the Pandit Nehru his fervent passion for the cause of Indian Nationalism leaves no time for morbid self-pity, which is sometimes a feature of the Hindu in adversity.

The young Nationalist to-day looks to Nehru for his inspiration rather than to Gandhi. The latter's pacific outlook and belief in the simple life is not the meat of the hot-blood of youth. Nehru, with his gigantic schemes for bringing work to the Indian masses through large scale public works, is giving them more solid aims for which to strive.

He has often been described as a Communist, but would prefer to be dubbed a Socialist. He believes that Communism, however, is the most reasonable goal for the march of history. As a scholar of Harrow and Balliol, and a barrister of the Inner Temple, he has impeccable qualifications as an advocate of his cause in London.

London Day By Day

Panto for "The Garden."

COVENT Garden means opera, but it also means cabbages and (back to the opera house rather than the market) pantomime.

Apart from the ballet it is the traditional home of English pantomime. There will be a revival at the approaching season of this year when "Red Riding Hood" is put on. Not for 17 years has a pantomime held the boards at Covent Garden, the last occasion being 1921.

The place has particular claims as a rightful home of the Christmas entertainment, for John Rich, who opened the theatre in 1733, was the "father of the English pantomime," the first harlequin of his time, and he developed the traditional character inventing the magical properties of the sword of lath.

How "Brum" Has Grown.

"AN unknown village inhabited by 50 agricultural workers" hardly sounds like a description of Birmingham, but such it was in 1677, and now it is the second city in the country with a population of 1,050,000. The years between are to be illustrated in pageant form under the experienced hand of Gwen Lally. The grounds of Aston Hall, a fine historic Jacobean mansion, will be the stage for eight great episodes.

Prehistoric monsters appear at the opening, then follows the granting of the charter, the battle of Crecy (at which many Birmingham lords and knights fought), the reception of Charles I. (who actually went to Aston Hall), the riots and the rise of Industrialism.

Englishmen (one can hardly expect Scots and Irishmen to consider such a matter), regard Birmingham as the most important city outside the Metropolis, and certainly it is a town of big names (the Prime Minister among them) and big fortunes. In these days of rearmament it is certainly well up to its standard of activity and prosperity. The King and Mr. Chamberlain are going to see this dramatisation of its eminence.

An Independent M.P.

MR. Clement Davies must be regarded as responsible in a very large degree for the Bill to constitute a third Court of Appeal which is to be considered this week.

Since he has himself gone out of practice as a barrister he has devoted his efforts to law reform. If he had not a quite detached position his influence would not be so great. In fact he is so independent that he does not care one hoot for the whips or anyone else.

Hanged for Forgery.

THE revolutionary changes which have taken place within a comparatively short time in the punishment meted out for various styles of crime, are recalled by the death of 86-year-old Mr. Cecil Chapman.

A Metropolitan magistrate for 23 years (he retired in 1924) Mr. Chapman could well remember an uncle of his who tried by every means available to save the life of a bank clerk sentenced to death for forging a small cheque.

With other partners in the bank concerned, Mr. Chapman's uncle went to Sir Robert Peel, then Home Secretary, and emphasised the life-long integrity of the elderly clerk and the comparative smallness of his only fraud. Peel, however, was adamant, arguing that the security of society depended on the punishment of crime, and that a reprieve for the clerk would create a precedent which might ruin the State.

The wretched bank clerk, as a warning to others, was duly hanged in public. Not many of the present generation realise that less than 100 years ago death was still the punishment for sheep-stealing.

Eddie Cantor.

LONDON is to see Eddie Cantor in person, and those who meet the greatest comedian on the screen in a rather different frame of mind, for he is set on providing money for Jewish children to escape the treatment they would have in Germany.

Although he is a funny man (he only calls himself that because his father was one), Cantor is the most serious-minded man in Hollywood. He is a Jew, over 56 years of age, and immensely wealthy. He never forgets a friend or an out of the profession, and has persistently fought for the under dog in filmdom.

Roosevelt knew what he was doing when with Marie Dressler he appointed him to help administer the recovery code for the industry.

London will recall how he came three years ago and saw the Minister of Transport, Mr. Hore-Belisha, on safety first moves. Few realised that he was in deadly earnest, as he is with his present mission. He has no ambition to go to Germany to "make people laugh who make my people cry," to use his own words.

Cantor was sacked for making his fellow messenger boys laugh as a young man, and has made his living at it ever since. He has a plump wife (who doesn't care) and five daughters, and they all like each other and are apart only by necessity.

Stout Integrity.

A GOOD many things might be said about Mr. George Buchanan, and, perhaps, the worst is that as an M.P. he is ineffective. For good or for ill he has allied himself to the I.L.P. members, and with them he can get nowhere. That he recognises this and that he accepts it is beyond question.

If he had been a "place-seeker" he could have got a job years ago as a member of the Unemployment Assistance Board, whose report he tore up yesterday. The salary was £2,000 a year, and to a man in Mr. Buchanan's position the temptation was great.

He resisted it for reasons which may have been good or bad; but ever time I look down on his red head I cannot refrain from thinking that democracy must survive so long as it breeds men of his stout integrity.

Brown As a Berry.

NO M.P. "takes the sun" quite so readily as Mr. Ernest Brown. He has come back from Geneva "happy as a grig" an as brown as the proverbial berry.

When I saw him first I though. his complexion as dark as that of many a Hindu I have seen. On closer examination this seems to be an exaggeration.

When he yachts in Devon waters he gets a deeper and warmer colour, but it is a fact that he "tans" more quickly than any other M.P. and he has tanned considerably in Switzerland.

WAZIRISTAN WAR.

SYRIAN WHO IS MAKING TROUBLE.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

DIRECTED AGAINST AFGHANS.

SIMLA, Friday.—The general situation in Waziristan has suffered a setback during the past week owing to the activities of a man who is known throughout the region as "Shamipir."

His real name is understood to be Saiyd Mohamad Sadi, and he is believed to be a Syrian subject of Damascus.

He came to India from Iraq early in 1933 and entered Waziristan at the invitation of leading Maliks with the ostensible intention of settling certain religious difficulties.

He was accompanied by a companion who acted as his orderly, but is suspected of being a Turkish subject.

After entering Waziristan he lived quietly for some time, but now he has declared that he intends raising a Lashkar from the Waziristan tribes and proceeding to Afghanistan in order to overthrow the reigning dynasty there.

In view of its international obligations the Government of India is watching the situation very carefully and taking special steps to prevent any influx of Waziristan tribes into Afghanistan.—Reuter.

SWISS NEUTRALITY.

APPROVAL FROM GERMANY.

The note is a reply to the Swiss memorandum informing the Reich Government of the decision of the League of Nations Council of April 29 to comply with the Swiss request to be freed from her obligations to support League Sanctions.

The German reply states that the "German Government sees in the unconditional maintenance of Swiss neutrality an important element for the safeguarding of European peace."—Reuter.

CHARGE OF THEFT.

LIVERPOOL STORE ARREST.

SPOKE OF EMBALMED HUSBAND.

After her arrest, following an exciting chase in a city store, a young woman told the Liverpool police that the embalmed body of her husband was lying at an address in London awaiting burial.

This was disclosed at Liverpool Police Court yesterday, when a titian-haired woman, aged 29, wearing a smart green-check costume and a stylish blue velour hat, appeared in the dock under the name of Caroline Richards, or Kendall, of Sharstead Street, London, S.E.

She was remanded in custody for a week, accused of stealing a handbag containing £2 17s cash and other articles to the total value of £7, the property of Miss Phyllis Mary M'Naughton.

Mr. W. S. Oliver, prosecuting, said the accused woman was seen coming out of the private office of Miss M'Naughton, who was a gown buyer in a city store. She was followed to another store, where she was seen to throw the bag on to a boot-repairing counter. When taken into custody she said her correct name was Kendall, and that the embalmed body of her husband was lying in a house in New Street, London, awaiting burial, which was to take place that day.

Mr. Oliver said inquiries had been made by the London police, and it was perfectly true that a man was awaiting burial there, but the police had not yet completed their inquiries, and were not at all satisfied as to the identity of the woman in the dock.

COMPENSATION AT £1 A MONTH

IN BELFAST MOTOR CASES.

INSURANCE LIABILITY DENIED.

At Belfast Recorder's Court, Edward Stevenson, 53 Frankfort Street, Belfast, sued John Joseph Connell, Gilnahirk, Knock, for damages for loss and injury caused, as alleged, by the negligence of defendant in the driving of a motor-car at Castlereagh Road on Sunday, January 30, at about 6-30 p.m.

Mr. D. Lyttle (instructed by Messrs. N. and F. Tughan) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Charles Stewart (instructed by Mr. James J. Napier) was for defendant.

Stevenson said he was walking outwards along the footpath of the Castlereagh Road, and was knocked unconscious by a motor-car which came from behind. The footpath was separated from the road by a drain.

WITNESS FROM LONDON.

Alex. Miskelly, Antrim Street, Lisburn, said he was with plaintiff. He thought the mudguard or the door of the car struck Stevenson. The car went on for 60 or 70 yards.

Constable James Hooks (Willowfield) said the footpath was about 5ft. 5ins. wide. It would be difficult at night to see where the footpath began.

Connell said when he passed the tram terminus it was very dark. He was travelling at about 20 m.p.h. on the crown of the road with his headlights on. His wife told him to stop as the car had struck something, and just afterwards a man told him to come back as he had killed a man. Witness did not see plaintiff. After he had taken plaintiff to his sister-in-law's house he told witness that when knocked down he had just lighted his pipe. Witness stopped the car in two lengths of itself.

Mrs. Connell said she heard a slight bump, as if someone had pushed against the side of the car.

Mr. E. J. M'Kean, K.C. (Deputy Recorder) gave a decree for £15, with £1 1s costs.

Mr. Stewart said defendant's insurance company had denied liability.

Defendant agreed to pay £1 monthly.

FALLS ROAD ACCIDENT.

Kathleen M'Dermott, a minor, by Kathleen M'Dermott, her mother, of 42 Leeson Street, sued Hugh D. M'Cambridge, 25 Locan Street, owner, and Charles M'Laverty, 20 Clowney Street, driver, for £50 for loss and injury caused by negligence in driving a motor-car on Falls Road on December 28.

Mr. W. Weatherup (instructed by Mr. B. Campbell), for plaintiff, said negligence was admitted, and the only question for his Honour to decide was the extent of damages.

Mr. John Agnew (instructed by Messrs. Daniel O'Rorke and Son) appeared for M'Cambridge, and (instructed by Mr. A. Ward) for M'Laverty.

His Honour gave a decree for £35, with £1 1s costs.

Mr. Agnew said M'Laverty was driving the car for M'Cambridge to a garage for repairs when the accident occurred, and the insurance company had repudiated liability.

His Honour made an order that £1 per month should be paid into Court.

THREE NEW JUDGES.

BILL TO COME BEFORE COMMONS.

BUDGET AMENDMENTS.

LORDS' LAST WORD ON COAL BILL.

Most M.P.'s are hoping to have a rest from foreign affairs next week (writes the Press Association Lobby correspondent).

Conclusions of the Committee stage of the Finance Bill, which embodies the Budget proposals, will occupy the whole of Monday and Tuesday. There are many amendments down.

One proposes additional Empire Preference on the whole of the 900,000 tons of Empire sugar imported annually instead of only 360,000 tons as at present. With this extra help it is felt that the West Indies sugar industry would be able to pay better wages and so present discontent would be lessened.

Another amendment proposes that, if a child over 16 is still incapable of earning a living and is dependent on relatives, full income tax allowances should be continued with regard to him. This proposal—in the hands of Mr. Herbert Williams, Sir Gifford Fox, Sir John Mellor and Mr. Perkins—is similar in spirit to another which suggests tax concessions for human wear and tear, or in other words a rebate if a man has had heavy doctor's bills during the year.

"BLASPHEMY" BILL.

A lively prelude is like to be provided on Tuesday by Captain A. H. M. Ramsay, who will, under the ten minute rule, introduce a Bill to prevent aliens in Britain from publishing anything blasphemous, or from participating in or promoting any anti-Christian meeting or movement. Three months' imprisonment and deportation are proposed for offenders.

Strong support is being given to the Bill by the Order of the Child, an organisation concerned with the moral welfare of children. The immediate effect of the Bill might be to restrict some activities in connection with the coming World Congress of Freethinkers, which is to be held in London.

Captain Ramsay emphasises that his Bill does not challenge the rights of free speech among British people, who are entitled to take part in the Congress, but he does not think aliens should come and take advantage of those rights.

There is likely to be much opposition to the Bill, and a division will be called on it.

Sir Thoms Moore, with the backing it is understood of the National Horse Association and the R.S.P.C.A., will also under the ten minute rule introduce a Bill to regulate riding establishments and prevent the overworking of horses.

All Wednesday and much of Thursday will be taken up with report and third reading of the Bacon Industry Bill. Mr. W. S. Morrison (Minister of Agriculture) will be in charge for the Government and speakers will include Mr. A. V. Alexander, Mr. Herbert Holdsworth, Mr Richard Acland and Mr. Wilfrid Roberts.

From 7-30 p.m. on Thursday second reading of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Amendment) Bill will be taken. This provides for three new judges of the Court of Appeal, each of whom will receive a salary of £5,000 a year, while pensions are £3,500 a year. There are now two Courts of Appeal, but this will enable a third to be instituted and legal congestion will be relieved. Sir Stafford Cripps and Mr. Kinsley Griffith will speak.

COMMODITY RESERVES.

If opportunity offers during the early part of the week, the third reading will be taken of the Essential Commodities Reserves Bill dealing with the buying of wheat, oil and other things in case of war, and the Imperial Telegraphs Bill.

Business so far as Friday has not yet been fixed.

Final discussion of the Coal Bill will take place in the House of Lords on Tuesday. Some peers would like to reject the Bill altogether, and there are many amendments which may present problems when the Bill is returned to the Commons the following week.

Viscount Esher will on Wednesday call attention to the necessity for amending the Covenant of the League of Nations, "so that the redress of grievances shall precede the punishment of aggression."

Mr. Ernest Brown's Bill to empower the Trade Boards and Agricultural Wages Boards to negotiate "holidays with pay" agreements will be published during the next week. A branch of the Ministry of Labour has been set aside to deal with paid holiday problems that will concern millions of workers.

Next Friday the new Factories Act—which was passed last year—comes into force.

When the Central Council of the National Union of Conservative and Unionist Associations meets on Thursday there will be a proposal that the War Office should be renamed the "Army Department" to avoid the official use of the word "war." Mr. Duncan Sandys will move a resolution on national registration to avoid dangerous delay in organising the nation's man-power in the early stages of a war, and a number of other topics will be discussed.

Mr. Geoffrey Mander may seek an early opportunity of making a "personal statement to the Commons on the controversy which has arisen between himself, the Prime Minister and Lady Astor over reports in American newspapers regarding "British foreign policy."

STOLEN GAINSBOROUGHS.

FIVE YEARS FOR RECEIVER.

After giving evidence that he had been warned that he would be "cut to pieces" if he gave information to the police, George Owen, (38), dealer, of Kennington, London, S.E., was sentenced to five years' penal servitude at Kent Assizes yesterday for receiving two Gainsborough oil paintings worth £27,600, stolen from Chilham Castle in April.

Mr. Justice Humphreys, passing sentence, said Owen was one of a gang of very dangerous criminals. He had lived a life of crime since 1918, and his last sentence was five years' penal servitude.

"I am perfectly satisfied if you chose you could give the information to the police which will be very valuable to them in their endeavour to trace the thieves," he said.

"You will be able during the sentence to consider that matter. If you do think it right to give that information it may be, but I cannot say, that it will be considered by the authorities who always have the power to lessen a sentence."

LATE MR. D. BARRY, O.B.E.

FUNERAL AT BALLYCARRY.

There was a large assembly of mourners at the funeral at Ballycarry yesterday of Mr. David Barry, O.B.E., deputy chairman of the British and Irish Steam Packet Company, Ltd., and formerly manager of the company. A large number of personal friends from Dublin travelled to pay their last tribute of respect.

Sir Alfred Read, chairman of the company, was represented by Mr. Percy Wharton, manager; Mr. J. L. Robinson, of the Burns Laird Company, by Mr. J. H. Sterling, while Mr. S. Berkeley, J.P., of the Belfast Steamship Company, was also present.

The family mourners included—Mrs. Barry (widow), Mrs. Gill (daughter), Dr Martin Barry (son), Mr. George Barry J.P., Larne (brother), Mr. Fred Barry (cousin), and Dr. Fred Gill (son-in-law).

The clergy present included the Rev. Dr. J. L. Morrow, Clontarf; Rev. N. Thompson, B.A., Blackrock; Rev. Dr. J. C. Johnston, formerly of the Abbey Church, Dublin; Rev J. W. Johnston, M.A., Townsend Street Church, Belfast; Rev. W. A. Montgomery, B.A., Killinchy; Rev. Thos. Bartley, B.A., senior minister of Ballycarry, and the Rev David Hanson, B.A., C.F., Larne.

Officiating were the Rev. A. T. Rentoul, B.A., Ballycarry; the Rev. T. Bartley, B.A., and the Rev. J. Knox Elliott, B.A., Islandmagee.

AUSTRIAN TROUBLE.

NAZI DISSENSIONS THE CAUSE.

DELEGATION TO SEE HITLER

BERLIN KEEPS ANXIOUS WATCH.

BERLIN, Friday.—The dissensions in Vienna between Austrian Nazis and the Nazis from the Reich, who occupy many of the most responsible positions in the administration of the new province, have now reached such a pitch that a delegation of eight members of the former Austrian Legion has come to Berlin to seek an audience with Herr Hitler.

In the absence of the Fuhrer in Berchtesgaden they have had conversations with high officials in the Reich Chancellery. They are, however, determined to see Herr Hitler personally, and unless he decides to visit Vienna shortly to study the situation for himself they may go on to Berchtesgaden, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

The Austrian Legion was made up of Austrian Nazis who fled to Germany under the Chancellorship of Dr. Dollfuss and Dr. von Schuschnigg. Its members were repatriated when Austria was annexed by Germany.

The most important demand of the Austrian Nazis is for the recall of Herr Buerckel, who, as Reich Commissioner for Austria, has powers over-riding those of the Austrian Provincial Government.

He is a man of stern and uncompromising character and has failed to arrive at a good understanding with Herr von Seyssinquart, the Governor of Austria and other Austrian leaders.

The idealists among the Austrian Nazis also complain of the ceaseless intrigues going on among different groups of Nazis to obtain high posts in the Government and party administration. They say that periods of imprisonment or internment in concentration camps are used as trump cards in this game, and that men who have not "suffered for the movement" are apt to be disregarded whatever their qualifications or abilities.

It appears that Herr Hitler, who, as reported previously, decided to cancel his expected trip to Vienna at the last moment on Saturday, wishes, in accordance with his usual custom, to let the trouble reach a head before intervening. There is no doubt, however, that developments are being watched with some anxiety in Berlin.

GRAVE STATE OF DISORDER.

For some weeks past it has been known in London that a grave state of disorder exists in Austria and that Herr Buerckel was finding himself unable to cope with the situation, writes the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" diplomatic correspondent.

This was understood to be the reason for a journey he made recently to Berchtesgaden for a discussion with Herr Hitler and Herr Hess, deputy-leader of the Nazi party.

Immediately after that visit a complete reorganisation of Austria as a political area was announced. Since then there has been little information to indicate the sequel.

It is common knowledge that a very large contingent of the German secret police, headed by Herr Himmler and Herr Heydrich, moved into Austria at the time of the annexation.

These two party officials represent one of the most powerful forces at work in Germany to-day. They stand for the full Nazi expansionist programme, to be carried through by an aggressive policy.

Between them and the army a struggle for pre-eminence has been proceeding for a considerable time. When the army was "purged" on February 4 it was understood to be at the instigation of Herr Himmler.

It is pointed out, however, that Herr Hitler, resisting any suggestion that the Reichswehr should become subordinate to the secret police, then assumed full leadership of the military forces.

While the army chiefs continue to oppose all policies which might plunge Germany into a major war, the "advanced" leaders are understood to counsel more challenging action. It is therefore significant that they should have established themselves so strongly in Austria.

It is believed that the army leaders are doing their utmost to redress the balance of control in Austria lest the "advanced" leaders should overstep the bounds of prudence.

MISGIVINGS IN GERMANY.

News of recent events in Austria is gradually penetrating to the people of the Reich and has occasioned some misgivings. The activities of the secret police, always on the increase, press heavily on the ordinary German citizen.

It is also becoming clear that the Sudenten Germans of Czecho-Slovakia observing the complete submersion of the Austrian Nazis by party officials from the Reich are becoming more genuinely of opinion that a solution of their difficulties negotiated within the framework of the Czecho-Slovak State may have clear advantages for themselves.

STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION'S BAN.

MUNICH, Friday.—By order of Herr Himmler, the German Chief of Police, all Catholic associations of students and former students have been dissolved.

This was announced by Herr Scheel, the "Reich Student Leader," speaking at Heidelberg last night. Any attempt to reorganise the associations will be severely punished, says the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

JEWISH REFUGEES ROWED TO HOVE.

THEY MUST LEAVE AGAIN.

"WHERE SHALL I GO," ASKED ONE.

Two Jewish political refugees who were arrested after rowing ashore from a Belgian cargo boat at Hove (Sussex) on Wednesday appeared before the local magistrates there.

They were Naftaly Dukler, a 46-year-old Austrian agent, and Peter Sibirksky, a 44-year-old Russian plumber. They were charged with an offence under the Aliens Order, 1920.

According to the solicitor for the defence Dukler went to Hamburg in 1936, travelling for his firm.

He was there accused of smuggling money out of Austria and Germany. He immediately left Germany and returned to Austria, but as a result of the recent union between the two countries Austria no longer was a refuge or a safe place for him. He was a Jew and a member of the Social Democratic Party in Austria.

It was, continued the solicitor, a well-known fact that the German Government were very intolerant of their Jewish citizens and so Dukler quitted the country. He boarded a boat at Antwerp and there met Sibirksky by accident. They had nothing in common except that they were Jews and political refugees. Sibirksky was a Jew born at Odessa. He was opposed to the political regime, and, as the magistrates knew, only one party was allowed in Russia.

"He says he was overheard to say that Stalin would not be in power very much longer and for that he was sent to a concentration camp."

He was later released but remained suspected and found that his life was probably in danger. He therefore slipped over the frontier and went via Danzig to Antwerp.

A police inspector said that the Home Office were of opinion that there must be something unusual in the case for these two men to enter the country in this manner without making an application to enter, which would in ordinary circumstances have been received sympathetically.

The magistrates recommended that both men be deported and on hearing this decision Sibirksky, shrugging his shoulders in a gesture of despair, asked, "Where shall I go?"

FORTUNE UNDER WAISTCOAT.

STRASSBOURG, Friday.—A passenger who reached Strassbourg from Prague by air with a false passport was arrested and found to have no less than £1,354 in foreign notes secreted on his person. He gave the name of Isidore Hubert, aged 34.

When searched at the Customs House a small fortune was found hidden in his clothes.

The man declared that he had to flee from Poland after selling all his properties.—Exchange.

"LIBERTY STOLEN."

M.P.'S TELEGRAMS TO HITLER.

PERSECUTION PROTESTS.

HAS RECEIVED NO REPLY.

Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, Conservative M.P. for Handsworth, Birmingham, has sent a long telegram addressed to Herr Hitler, Government Offices, Berlin.

This is the telegram:—

"Sir, I regret that no reply has been received to my request to your Ambassador to receive a few M.P.'s to protest against persecution in Germany.

"As one Aryan to another, may I lament this omission? Meanwhile please drop all thought of colonies as long as you attack your own minorities, and pray stop calling me a Communist and everyone who opposes your divine rule, for it was German money which sent Communist Lenin in a closed coach to bolshevise Russia, and it is the same money which pays for poison propaganda in Palestine and anarchy in Jamaica.

"Your great crime is that you stole away the liberty of your land, but freedom will unlock agencies stronger than force and fear. Unity will beat mere uniformity in the end."

This is a sequel to two other telegrams which Commander Locker-Lampson has sent in the last week. One was to Hitler asking him, if he must bully people, "to choose somebody bigger than himself." The other was to the German Ambassador in London requesting him to receive a deputation of protest against things that have been happening in Germany.

No answer has been received to either, but Commander Locker-Lampson has recently been attacked in the German Press because of a speech in which he drank "death to all dictators and long life to all liberators."

Incidentally, while at Cambridge Commander Locker-Lampson won the Prince Consort's prize for German, but to-day's telegram was sent in English.

He is one of the most fearless and independent-minded of M.P.'s, and he has been in Parliament for over 25 years, although he is now only 56. In the war he served with the armoured cars in France, Belgium, Russia, Turkey, Roumania, the Caucasus and Austria.

IF THE CZECHS WERE ATTACKED.

FRENCH QUERY TO POLAND.

CLOSEST SECRECY MAINTAINED.

The impression that important diplomatic conversations are taking place in Warsaw is further strengthened by the arrival of Mr. Grzybowski, Polish Ambassador to Russia, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

M. Lukasiewicz, Polish Ambassador to France, has been in Warsaw since Monday, and it has been reported that "certain proposals" made by the French Government are now receiving the earnest consideration of Colonel Beck, the Foreign Minister.

The closest secrecy is being maintained about the "certain proposals."

One of several versions is that the French Government is anxious to have definite information concerning Poland's attitude if Czecho Slovakia were the victim of unprovoked aggression and Russia went to her assistance in accordance with her pact.

The Polish Government has always refused to consider the possibility of Soviet troops being granted the right of transit across Polish territory, but the contingency foreseen might refer to the use of Roumanian territory.

Poland has a military alliance with Roumania, the main purpose of which it has always been understood in Warsaw was to present a common barrier to any attempt by the Soviet Army to move westwards.

MASONIC BAZAAR IN ISLANDMAGEE.

HALL REBUILDING FUND.

ST. JOHN'S LODGE EFFORT.

Under the auspices of St. John's Masonic Lodge No. 162, Islandmagee, a two-day bazaar was opened on Friday afternoon in the Masonic Hall in aid of the Building Fund.

V.W. Br. James Walker, Larne, who presided, mentioned that the warrant of Lodge 162 was issued on May 6, 1813, and for many years the lodge-room was contained in a small whitewashed cottage at Millbay. In 1871 a one-storied hall was erected on the site of the present hall. This somewhat inadequately suited the purpose up till 1924, when the hall was enlarged. Being a progressive and flourishing lodge, which had now on its roll 115 brethren, they last year decided to practically rebuild the hall and make it worthy of their great Order.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Antrim passed the plans and most generously made a gift of £250 and a loan of £100, to be repaid in five years. The brethren themselves had contributed £200. The cost of the completed hall was practically £950, thus leaving a debit balance of £500, including the £100 loan. He congratulated the brethren on their magnificent building, which he described as one of the best in the Province of Antrim.

OPENED BY MRS. H. ROBINSON.

Declaring the sale open, Mrs. Harold Robinson, Magheramorne, said that although women were not allowed to take part actively in the good work of the Masonic Order they knew that the widows and orphans of Masons were well taken care of by their more fortunate Masonic brethren. She warmly commended the object of the bazaar, which she hoped would be a great success.

Mrs. Robinson was presented with a bouquet by little Amy Dick, daughter of W.Br. John Dick, chaplain of the lodge.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Robinson was proposed by W.Br. James Macaulay, W.M. of the lodge, seconded by W.Br. John Dick, and the Chairman was thanked by W.Br. W. S. Milner.

HE REFUSED TO ESCAPE.

SENTENCE ON MAN WHO GAVE ALARM

It was announced at Chatham on Friday that Driver W. H. Keeping, of the Training Battalion, Royal Engineers, has been sentenced to 56 days' detention for theft from persons subject to military law.

At his court-martial Keeping pleaded that when two men at Brompton Barracks, Chatham, broke out of their cells and overpowered a military policeman, they offered to release Keeping from his cell.

Keeping declined the chance of escape and instead gave the alarm through which the men were recaptured. The men tied the policeman to a bed and took the cell keys from him.

WOMAN WITH "SICK MIND."

TRAGEDY OF TAILORESS.

LIVED TOO MUCH AT HOME.

MYSTERY OF SIX GREEN CRYSTALS.

The inquest was resumed before a jury at Bradford on Friday on Edie Green, 23-year-old tailoress, of Great Horton Road, Bradford, who was found dead on Sunday night, June 5.

On May 31 Green appeared before the Bradford magistrate, Dr. F. J. O. Coddington, on remand, having previously been found guilty of receiving a stolen golf bag, clubs and golfing attire.

Dr. Coddington told Green that the report he had had from a doctor confirmed the opinion he had formed of her. "You no doubt do not know it but your mind is sick. It is sick because you are living too much at home and associating too much with your mother."

He told Green to get out more, get to know more people and make new friends.

"You must get some work," he said. "I am going to adjourn this case for one month for you to get work, and you must keep it. If you do not get work and keep it more than a month you will go to prison."

HAD BEEN OUT ON BAIL.

On Friday the Coroner, Mr. J. G. Hutchinson, addressing the jury, said that it was a case in which a person was supposed to have destroyed herself by coal-gas poisoning. She was brought up some time ago before the justices for committing an indictable offence and was allowed bail on particular conditions. Subsequently she was found dead in her home.

Referring to the evidence at the opening of the inquest, the Coroner said the mother, Maud Green, had stated she last saw her daughter alive about noon on Sunday, June 5. About 10-30 p.m. she returned home and found her lying dead in bed. A police constable stated there was a strong smell of gas when he visited the home at 11-7 p.m. Green was lying in bed fully dressed except for her shoes, and wearing a dressing-gown on top of her clothes.

Dr. Silveston said that when he examined the body at 11-30 p.m. rigor mortis was complete. That condition usually set in between 8 and 12 hours after death.

Detective Ambler, coroner's officer, said he attended the post-mortem and handed parts of the body to Dr. Lloyd, of Bradford Technical College, together with six green crystals which had been taken from the woman's left breast.

POISONING BY COAL GAS.

Dr. L. L. Lloyd, of the Bradford Technical College, said that there was evidence of carbon monoxide poisoning in the blood submitted to him. The green crystals were the remains of a sweet stuff, similar to acid drops.

Dr. Rimmer said that after hearing the evidence of Dr. Lloyd he would say the cause of death was poisoning by coal-gas.

Miss Annie Maud Lily Hayden said that Green had been charged with a criminal offence, and consideration was shown to her on condition that she got work. She was promised employment before she had to appear before the magistrates.

The Coroner—Did she appear pleased?—Yes.

Summing up, the Coroner said that actually the cause of death was not really in doubt, but the circumstances surrounding it were of a mysterious nature. Had it not been for the crystals, then possibly on might have thought it an ordinary case of suicide.

Green had apparently been attending her mother in a very devoted manner. She had got into trouble and was dealt with by the authorities leniently to prevent her being branded a criminal.

The jury returned a verdict that Green died from coal-gas poisoning, but whether self-administeerd or administered at the instigation of some other person or persons the evidence was not sufficient to show.

DEEDS OF SEPARATION.

DIVORCE PRESIDENT'S DECISION.

Sir Boyd Merriman, the President in the Divorce Court yesterday decided the question whether a wife, who in a deed of separation in 1929 had withdrawn charges of cruelty against her husband in her petition for judicial separation, could make the same charges in a petition for divorce which she had filed under the Matrimonial Causes Act 1937.

He made an order that the wife's petition for judicial separation would now be formally dismissed and her petition for divorce would be struck out.

The names of the parties were not given in the case, which was stated to be of importance as many people had entered into deeds of separation instead of fighting cases to an end in the courts.

THE SALE OF BUTTER

TRADE DESCRIPTION POINT.

WORD "IRISH" ON WRAPPER.

"CO-OP." SOCIETY WINS APPEAL.

References to geographical, political and trade misnomers, and a disclosure that the coming into operation of the Twenty-six County Constitution provoked the withdrawal from the English Court of Appeal of a prosecution at the instance of the Northern Ireland Ministry of Agriculture lent considerable interest to an appeal heard by Judge Green at Enniskillen Quarter Sessions.

The appeal was brought by the Lisbellaw Co-operative Agricultural and Dairy Society, Ltd., against a fine of £10 at Lisbellaw Petty Sessions, when the appellants were prosecuted for applying a false trade description to butter sold by them.

Dr. B. Maginess, M.P. (instructed by Messrs. Clarke and Gordon, solicitors), appeared for the appellants, and Mr. G. E. Warren (per Mr. Jas. Cooper, Crown Solicitor) replied on behalf of the Ministry.

Mr. Warren said an inspector of the Ministry purchased a pound of creamery butter in the shop of Messrs. A. C. Walmsley, Ltd., which had come from the Lisbellaw Creamery. After making inquiries it was found that this was Irish butter which had been purchased by the Lisbellaw Creamery and re-packed by them in a carton which was such as to lead people to believe it was a product of the Lisbellaw Creamery, when, in fact, it was not.

Robert Irwin, of the inspection staff of the Ministry, gave evidence of purchasing the butter from Messrs. Walmsley. The carton bore the words: "Lisbellaw Pure Creamery Butter." There was no other mark indicative of the source of origin.

To Dr. Maginess, witness said he could not say from its appearance whether the butter was Lisbellaw or Irish Free State. He supposed the wrapper enclosing it would be equally applicable to Northern Ireland or the Free State. The Red Hand mark on a carton signified that the butter was of premier quality.

R. C. Walmsley said he bought the pound of better from Messrs. Jordan (Enniskillen) as a Lisbellaw product.

Herbert Noble, of Messrs. Jordan's staff, said that from the description on the carton they believed it was a product of the Lisbellaw Creamery.

George Espie, of the Ministry of Agriculture, proved correspondence which passed between the creamery and the Ministry, who wrote asking the Creamery why the butter was not packed in a Red Hand wrapper? The creamery replied that their own butter was so packed, but butter purchased by them was sold in their own wrappers. The officials considered this carton indicated that the butter was manufactured by the Lisbellaw Creamery itself. It was the custom to describe I.F.S. butter as "Irish Creamery Butter."

USE OF THE TERM "IRISH."

Dr. Maginess enquired if a case had been dismissed in which the Ministry had had a case stated for hearing by an English High Court on the question of the use of the word "Irish" to describe "Northern Ireland" butter.

Mr. Espie said the case was withdrawn in view of the new "Eire" Constitution.

Dr. Maginess—That does not affect the issue?—The Ministry contended it better to withdraw the case in view of the new Constitution. Butter was described as "Irish" which should have been "Northern Ireland." A case was stated but in the meantime the Constitution had been enacted and the case was withdrawn.

Dr. Maginess—I am not sure what the Constitution point had to do with it. When matters of high policy are involved I had better not pursue it.

He opined that the complainant's case had not shown that the butter was Irish Creamery Butter and Judge Green agreed.

Mr. Warren—In his letter of 12th February the Manager says it is Irish.

Judge Green—Are you asking me to decide that "Irish" means "Free State"? "Irish" is a word that equally applies to the whole country.

Mr. Warren—As a trade term it means Free State.

Judge Green—"Irish" is not a trade term, at least I don't know of it. I have no evidence that it is a trade term. Irish Creamery Butter is a perfectly general statement that can be applied to butter made in any creamery in Ireland. I will have to get a little more definite evidence to shaw that the use of the term "Irish Creamery Butter" does not cover Ulster or Northern Ireland. Donegal, Cavan and Monaghan are part of Ulster and butter made in those counties would be Ulster Creamery butter made in Ulster.

Following considerable legal argument and evidence by Richard Potters, manager of the appellant Creamery, his Honour held that it was obvious there had been a mistake in the correspondence as regards the wrapper. There was no reason to think that the manager should come up and swear a lie. The conviction was reversed.

DECLINING SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

THE POSITION OF TEACHERS

SUBJECT OF CONFERENCE.

It was learned yesterday that certain proposals are now being considered by the Ulster Ministry of Education and the Irish National Teachers' Organisation to meet the case of public elementary school teachers who are threatened with loss of positions owing to a falling off in the attendance of pupils.

This drop is due principally to a decline in school population as a result of a diminution in the birth rate over a certain period.

The question was raised by the Irish National Teachers' Organisation some time ago, and representatives of that body attended at the Ministry in Belfast yesterday for the purpose of a further discussion.

The Minister, Rt. Hon. J. H. Robb, K.C., was accompanied by Mr. A. N. Bonaparte Wyse, Permanent Secretary, and Mr. T. E. Brown, Assistant Secretary, and the members of the deputation were:—Mr. H. A. M'Auley, Portadown; Mr. A. Martin, Co. Down; Mr. R. Neilly, Ballymena; Mr. P. M'Givern, B.A., Belfast; Mr. H. Connor, and Mr. J. Beattie, M.P., Secretary of the Northern Branch.

The question was fully discussed, and it was learned after the interview that certain proposals are now being considered by the Ministry and the Irish National Teachers' Organisation.

These proposals, if eventually adopted, will mean that the Government will not get the saving as a result of the reduction of staffs, and as a consequence the Ministry of Finance will have to be consulted before any change is made.

PIGEON FANCIER FINED £5.

ANIMAL POISONING CHARGE.

CASE AT HOLYWOOD.

At Holywood Petty Sessions a case of interest to pigeon fanciers was heard before Mr. S. C. Clarke, R.M.

District-Inspector Gorman, M.C., charged William Ogborn, Highbury, Birch Drive, Holywood, with laying poison. Mr. J. B. Getty defended.

The prosecution's case was that defendant kept homing pigeons and had lost several of them through being killed by cats, and he decided to take action to get rid of the nuisance. He discussed the matter with a chemist, who advised him to go to the police, and he did so.

Ernest Allen, chemist, said in September Mr. Ogborn came to him and discussed poison. He said he wanted to poison cats. Witness told him he would have to go to the police. He did so, and returned and told him it was all right. He then gave him five grains and entered it in the drugs register "for cats."

Constable Kerrin gave particulars of animals poisoned.

Replying to Mr. Getty, witness said he did not see any of the animals.

Mr. Getty contended that there was no evidence to show that the dogs had been poisoned by his client.

Defendant said he had 60 racing pigeons and since last September he had had twelve birds killed by cats.

In fining defendant £5 and costs, Mr. Clarke said he did not think that Ogborn was a man who had just walked about and dropped poison down. He thought he was taking every care, otherwise he would have imposed the full penalty of £10.

Mr. Getty appealed for the fine to be reduced, but the R.M. said he had taken into consideration the certain amount of care which Ogborn had used when laying the poison.

Defendant was given three months to pay.

For speeding with a motor lorry, Geo. Davidson, Tullymakill, Breda Park, Newtownbreda, was fined 20s.

35,000,000 GASMASKS READY.

HALF MILLION A.R.P. VOLUNTEERS.

Wing-Commander E. J. Hodsoll, Chief A.R.P. Officer, addressing the Chief Constables' Association conference at Manchester, stated that the Government had 35,000,000 civilian respirators in their regional store depots. Steel helmets for air raid precaution workers and hundreds of millions of sandbags were on order.

The balance of the respirators to cover the whole population was being made and would be given out in due course.

It was encouraging, Wing-Commander Hodsoll said, that the half-million mark of A.R.P. volunteers had nearly been reached.

Following St. Patrick

☆

"I FOLLOW ST. PATRICK." Oliver St. John Gogarty. (Rich & Cowan, 16s).

OF the four patron saints of the British Isles, St. Patrick is the only one who is alive to-day as a real personality regarded with respect and affection. Patrick is Ireland and Ireland is St. Patrick in a sense that St. George can never represent England.

His name is a household word in Ireland, and never a day passes but it is invoked with an affection usually only accorded to a well-known and living personality.

Professor Bury and Professor M'Alister have both in their respective "Lives" unearthed as exhaustive and authoritative historical facts as will probably be known of the saint. In his own particular way, Dr. Gogarty has supplemented all previous works, though he himself would be the first to deny any pretensions of his book to be a "work."

"I Follow St. Patrick" is an entirely novel and fascinating manner of presenting an historical figure. The author defines it, not biography but geographical history. Topography is the basis of the book.

Set down in cold print, it seems a fanciful and pompous idea, but the results when related in Dr Gogarty's inimitable style, have that elusive charm that is so peculiarly Irish.

Imbued with a respect for legitimate historical research and detail, he yet refuses to accept any doubtful geographical fact and reserves his right of personal opinion. So he commences with a visit to the varied places generally credited with being Patrick's birthplace.

☆

At Slemish

BY a process of elimination and imagination worthy of the great detectives of fiction, he rejects Daventry, Bath, Scotland, France, and Spain, and decides on St. David's Head, in Wales.

He next visits Slemish, where Patrick after his capture, lived as a slave, traces his journey on the famous escape to Wicklow, the voyage to Gaul, his long stay on the island of St. Honerat, off the Cote d'Azur, and his adventurous journey back to Ireland to begin his great work.

This modern disciple journeyed on foot, by car, yacht, and aeroplane, working on the modern historical theory that "no legend associated with a particular place where a strong local tradition exists has ever been wholly discredited in the light of modern research."

Of no historical character more than Ireland's patron saint does this open up interesting avenues to explore. Legends of purely local character relating to St. Patrick exist all over Ireland and certain places in Wales. At Slemish and elsewhere, Dr. Gogarty talked with men to whom the saint's name and doings came as naturally to their lips as a Test Match cricketer to an Englishman's.

Dr. Gogarty disclaims any authority as an historian or theologian; he finds himself strangely warmed by the courageous and enduring personality of Patrick, not only as the introducer of Christian civilisation into savage tribal Ireland, but as a man whose characteristics and personality he believes has been stamped upon the Irish race for all time.

Exuberance

THIS theory and the resulting pilgrimage he makes into "I Follow St. Patrick." But unfortunately for those to whom St. Patrick is of less interest, he has not kept too closely to his route. His ever-stimulating and enthusiastic spirit is not bound down by his sympathy and devotion to his hero. His exuberant fancy flows into a host of subjects centuries removed from the coming of Christianity to Ireland.

It is these diversified strayings by the wayside that makes such an unusual and provoking book. It is this mixture of poetic imagination, an odd and revealing boyishness, scholarship, tart humour, above all a lack of any affectation and self-consciousness that gives the book its pervading charm that defies classification.

These side tracks include anecdotes of personalities who appeared in "As I Was Going Down Sackville Street," Tyrrell, Mahaffey, and George Moore, while on a visit to Mount Stewart and a flight over Saul with Lord Londonderry, the learned doctor is able to indulge his naive passion for aristocratic names. Whether recoiling from the vacuity of the international pleasure-seekers on the French Riviera, discussing early ships, Latin poets, Lord Beaverbrook's haircuts, or making the pilgrimage up Croagh Patrick, he is always stimulating and arresting.

His visit to Slemish he timed for "The Twelfth" because "I wanted to get as near as possible to the mentality of the fifth century." His identification of the Orangemen with the original Picts, and of the obdurate Milchu, who shut himself up in his dun and burned it down rather than submit to the faith of his former slave, as the first instance of "No Surrender" is as ingenious as it is diverting. His touch of fantasy allied to a Puckish humour in relation to the Orange Order is distinctly novel.

Dr. Gogarty's inimitable style, which casts on with effortless ease no matter whether his subject be erudite or infantile, has resulted once again in a book that stands alone of its kind. A word of praise is due to Bip Parea for the bold illustrations especially well suited to the period.

DOCTOR'S CORNER—

FAINTING

WHEN a person has a severe shock is overtired or remains for too long in an overheated atmosphere the balance of the circulation may be disturbed. The result is that the brain is temporarily deprived of sufficient blood and unconsciousness develops.

The main object, therefore, in restoring anyone who has fainted is to assist the return of blood to the brain and the patient should immediately be laid flat on his back.

The circulation to the brain is further encouraged by loosening the collar and all tight clothing round the neck. As soon as consciousness returns the patient should be gently removed to a cool, airy place.

Safe Heart-Breaks

I SAID TO ROSIE: "All right, I'll bet you a level ten bob that the jewels are not in the house."

"Very well," she said, "I'll bet you."

She was a stubborn, argumentative little brunette, with a snub nose and wide, brown eyes.

"But the papers say that Sir Hugh hasn't got a safe even," I said.

"A fat lot they know," she said.

"All right," I said. "Where is it? You know such a lot."

"In the library," she said.

"York is in England," I said.

"If you must know," she said, "it's behind a picture of a tramp."

"A fine place to be having a safe," I said—and that's how it all started.

★

WE were in the Park. It was Rosie's night off. I'd been leading up to this for a month. She was a funny, suspicious character. Ask her anything quietly, and she'd say: "What do you want to know for?" But call her a liar and she'd spill the beans, thinking that you were trying to be smart.

I'd read about the Kingsbury jewels. "If these international crooks can get away with big hauls," I said to myself, "why can't I?"

I heard a fellow in the Park say that we were all slaves. "You're a slave," he said, pointing at me. When I thought it over, I saw that he was right. For years I'd worked for the fly boys, opening their safes. And what cut did I get? A few lousy quid. "Organise yourselves," the speaker said to the crowd, "and the world is yours."

★

I THOUGHT he was right. "I'll be a big shot," I said to myself. "I'll be a little Al Capone, in this big city." Then I read in the papers about the Kingsbury jewels, and that's how I came to get mixed up with Rosie.

She was the parlourmaid there. She thought I was a clerk. I told her that I worked in the City. She was one of those girls who think that they are getting a social push up if they walk out with a fellow who's got a white-collar job.

I waited ten days after that argument in the Park before I got a chance to get the jewels.

"They're going to the German Ambassador's place to dinner to-night," she said to me when I rang her up. "So I can pop out for a little while. See you same place at eight."

"If I'm a bit late," I said, "go into that place we were before and have a cup of tea."

"You'd better not be late," she said.

"What time they leaving?" I asked.

"About seven," she said.

When I got to Sir Hugh's house it was 7-30. Except for a light in the basement the place was in darkness. I knew how I was going to get in. I had the place weighed up for a month. I nipped across the lawn and climbed up the drain-pipe that led to the balcony. It was a very dark night, and the lights in the street outside looked very bright.

The french windows of Miss Kingsbury's room were open. As I crept in I thought that the gods were with me. But I changed my mind about that when I was in the library, for no sooner was I in the room than the lights went up.

"Stand where you are and put up your hands," a voice said.

★

A TALL, grey, red-faced man was sitting on a table with a revolver in his hand. He was dressed in an overcoat and a topper, all ready to go out. At that moment a tall blonde, wearing a beautiful evening gown, came in.

"What are you playing, daddy?" she said. "Policemen and bandits?"

"Dial 999," he said.

The girl looked at me curiously. Then she burst out laughing.

"Don't be a fool, daddy," she said. "He isn't a burglar. He looks too funny to be a burglar."

"What are you doing here?" he asked me.

"To be honest," I said, bowing my head in shame, "I am a burglar. But give me a chance. I didn't want to do this. It's the wife and kids, sir—they're hungry."

"How do you go about robbing a place?" the blonde asked.

"Don't be an idiot, Diane," the man said. "Do as I tell you."

"But it will help my book, daddy," she said, petulantly. "It won't benefit anybody if he's locked up. But if he shows me how he goes to work it will give reality to my thriller."

"We haven't time to mess about here," the old man grumbled.

The girl caught hold of his arm.

"How do you find out where a safe is?" she asked. "Do you get off with one of the maids?"

"No, miss," I said. "I rely on my instinct."

"Do you mean to tell me that you can tell instinctively where a safe is?" She smiled up at her father. "Do you hear that, daddy?"

"Tommy rot," he said.

★

"I'LL tell you what," the girl said. "If he can find our safe let him go. If he can't—dial 999. That's fair."

I could see the old man yielding.

"It's all nonsense," he said.

"But give me that chance, sir," I said. "It's a sporting chance."

"Very well," he said. "It's damn silly, but go on."

I saw the picture of the tramp at the other end of the room. But I never went to it directly. I surveyed the books—the rows of books on the shelves—first. The old man followed with his daughter.

"My instinct tells me it's behind there," I said, pointing to the picture.

"See if you're right," he said.

It was there all right.

"Do let me see if he can open it, daddy," the girl said.

It was an easy can to open.

"Very clever, I must admit," the old man said. "It has taught me one thing—I shall have to get another."

★

THE girl wanted to see how I got out of the place.

"That's the easiest part of the business, miss," I told her.

"The next time, you want to be more thorough in your plans," the old man said.

"You're right, sir," I said. "But you'll never regret giving me a chance."

"I hope you don't either," he said.

You see how things are worked out. I was never meant to be a big shot . Had I been an international crook I'd have checked up to see whether Sir Hugh had left before I attempted to go in. As it was, I relied on Rosie.

★

SHE was fuming with rage when I saw her later.

"Well, I thought you wouldn't be able to come," I said.

"What's the alibi this time?" she asked.

"I saw lights in the place," I said.

"Well, after all, Cooky's there."

"I mean upstairs," I said.

"But Sir Hugh left at seven."

"Then he must have returned."

"We'll soon settle that," she said.

When we got to the house we found the drive filled with police cars. You can guess what happened. The jewels were gone.

When we were alone I said to Rosie, as I bent forward: "Give me a good hard kick."

"What's the matter? Are you crazy?"

"Absolutely," I said, and so I was. But honestly, I never dreamed that grafters would graft on grafters.

"Organise yourselves, and the world is yours," my foot!

Six-Minute Story No. 4: by Conrad Phillips

Surname Sidelights—BUTCHER

WHEN we consider the antiquity of the occupation of the butcher, it seems rather surprising that the surname derived therefrom was not more prominent in earlier times. The butchers were among the oldest trades to have their own guild.

* * * *

THEY took to themselves the motto from the Psalms—"Thou hast put all things in subjection under His feet; all sheep and oxen," and it is the motto of the butchers to this day. Since so many names were drawn from trades, it was inevitable that this essential business should contribute.

* * * *

BUT it must not be inferred that the ancestors of all of the surname Butcher were butchers. Sometimes the name was loosely applied to one who appeared callous or bloodthirsty. There are many famous examples in English history of the freedom with which Butcher was used as a nickname.

ALORD Clifford was called the Butcher; so was the Duke of Cumberland, the second son of George the Second; and John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester, was dubbed the Butcher of England. There are many others. The same tendency was, of course, to be found in lesser circles, so that the Butchers may owe their surname to ancestors who were butchers by trade or who for some reason had incurred the nickname.

* * * *

BUT it must be noted that the surname Butcher stands quite apart from Boucher, Bourchier, and Bouchier with which some have linked it. As might be expected, the surname has been established in many districts. Lower included it among Scottish family names in Edinburgh a hundred years ago. This was so, but it does not appear that the name was at all general in Scotland. Huntingdonshire and Kent have shared with the West the distinction of having the largest number of families of the name; followed by Suffolk, Shropshire, and Norfolk.

* * * *

IT has also been well known in Ireland. Dr. Samuel Butcher was Bishop of Meath at the beginning of the nineteenth century, and his son, Samuel Butcher, born in Dublin, was a celebrated scholar. He married the daughter of the famous Archbishop Trench, and he succeeded Professor Blackie at Edinburgh. He also represented Cambridge University in Parliament

* * * *

JOHN George Butcher, K.C., the eminent lawyer, who once represented York City in Parliament was also an Irishman, and became the first Baron Danesfort.

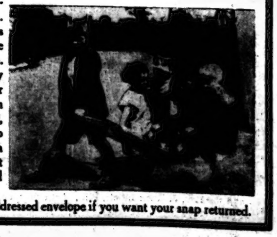

* * * *

MAJOR-GENERAL Sir George J. Butcher served in South Africa and the European War, and was Deputy Director of Ordnance Stores at Woolwich Arsenal.

A PLAIN MAN'S SERMON

Bracing Up

ONE of the oldest of the City of London Guilds is known as the Girdlers' Company. Its existence reminds us that the making of girdles was once a distinct and separate trade, which has now, presumably, been almost entirely absorbed into the more general trade of the clothiers. In one way this is rather a pity, because the girdle is not only one of the very oldest parts of human dress, but has also a special significance of its own.

Archæologists have been finding girdles in the tombs of Egypt, Crete, and Mesopotamia, which are the homes of some of the most ancient civilisations in the world. And the reason for the great antiquity of the girdle is a very simple and obvious one. Close fitting garments are scarcely older than the sixteenth century. Up to that time, in every part of the world, clothes were loose and flowing, and consequently needed the girdle to keep them in place.

In early times the girdle served also another very essential purpose, as it still does in the East to-day, that is as a receptacle where money and personal belongings could be carried. Pockets are a comparatively modern invention.

Unchanging

THE East has preserved the loose and flowing style of dress, because it is very much cooler than European fashions; and to-day in countries like Arabia, Syria, and Irak we can see people wearing the identical dress worn by Abraham. The East never changes.

This same dress was, of course, worn by Our Lord and His disciples, and it consisted of five parts. There was the tunic, or undergarment, called in the New Testament the vest or coat. Over this there was worn a loose, blanket-like garment called the mantle or cloak. Thirdly, there was the girdle. On the head there was the kaffan—either a kind of turban or else a square of white material kept in place by a fillet or hair ring. On the feet were the sandals.

Unfortunately, many of the stained-glass windows in our churches give us a grotesque travesty of this Eastern dress; and Our Lord and His Apostles are usually depicted draped in yards of what are apparently large curtains, which have to be clutched to prevent them slipping off! A modern illustrated New Testament will show their dress correctly.

There are many incidental and interesting references to this Eastern form of dress in the New Testament. Remember that Christ told His disciples that, if any man should take away their cloak, they should let him have their coat also.

But by far the most interesting to us is the account, given in the Gospels, of the division of Our Lord's garments amongst the soldiers at the Crucifixion. As there were four soldiers, the distribution of the cloak, girdle, kaftan, and sandals was a simple matter. But there remained the fifth garment—the coat or vest. As this was woven in one piece throughout, and as it was obviously senseless to tear it into four pieces, they tossed for it.

When the loose cloak or mantle was discarded, a man might sometimes be spoken of as being "naked," which does not mean stark naked, but only reduced to his vest or coat. (St. John xxi., 7.) When work was to be done, or when there was need to run swiftly, or when a journey had to be undertaken, the loins were girded up; which means that the long flowing cloak, which reached nearly to the feet, was hitched up into a girdle, and so drawn up to the knees out of the way. Thus "girding up one's loins" came to be the usual expression for preparing oneself for action or energetic movement of any kind.

Temptation

THE New Testament applies this metaphor in somewhat striking ways to spiritual things. Christians are told, for instance, to "gird up" the loins of their minds, which is such a typically Eastern form of expression. The word used means intellect; and it is another way of saying that Christians are to be intellectually alert and live with their mental faculties braced.

Then again, Christ has told us that we should live "with our loins girded about and our lights burning"; and if only we would try more than we do to follow His advice, and to adopt the Scout motto, "Be Prepared," it is likely enough that temptation would not catch us unawares so often as it does with such disastrous consequences to ourselves and to others.

And just one other instance. In the picture which he has drawn for us of the Christian soldier in his armour, St. Paul shows him to us with "his loins girt about with truth." It is not perhaps quite easy to know exactly what meaning St. Paul meant to attach to the several parts of the equipment which he describes; but I think that we shall not be far wrong if we suppose that he thought of the girdle as holding—to some extent—other things in their place, and therefore of primary importance.

It suggests to us the thought that no life can be a really good life which is not girt about with truth—truth in speaking; truth in thinking; truth in action and conduct. If we lie to ourselves, deceive our neighbours and act crookedly, then our whole character goes to pieces.

Truth, genuineness, sincerity, is the girdle which holds everything in place and prevents a man's life from becoming unprincipled.

REV. L. B. ASHBY

KESWICK CLOSING MEETINGS

MISSIONARY RALLY.

ADDRESSES FROM MANY FIELDS.

CONVENTION SUMMARY.

THE ATTENDANCE OF MINISTERS.

PORTSTEWART, Saturday.

The Convention of 1938 will close finally on Sunday evening, when the preacher is to be the Rev. James Dunlop, of Oldpark Presbyterian Church, the afternoon meeting being taken by Mr. G. F. Whitehead, London, who spoke at this morning's meeting for praise and testimony and will again speak in the tent this evening.

Many will look back upon the Ulster Keswick as among the best, if not the best, both as regards attendance and message, ever held in the North of Ireland.

There has been hardly any drop in numbers at any one of the meetings compared with another, and, when it is considered that every inch of space within the tent has been occupied on a occasions the record made in that respect must be classed as very high.

The teaching all through has been consistent with that of the original Keswick. The old truths have been restated and restated with an emphasis that can not be mistaken. The result must be a great influence for good, because it is only by keeping to the old doctrinal lines that revival may be expected to come.

At Friday's forenoon meeting the Rev. Sidlow Baxter conducted his Bible readings on the Epistle to the Philippians. He said the message from 4th Chapter of Philippians was one of strength. That was found in the 13th verse, the key verse, which was, "I can do all things in Christ which strengtheneth me." That meant all sufficiency.

There were some in the Church only to damage a godly ministry. What the Church needed to-day, after a century of devastating modernism, was a baptism of the love of Jesus. They were not loving enough. It was most essential that they should cease squabbling in the Church. Gentle forbearance was to be manifested to all men. It required strength to retain temper; it did not require much strength to lose temper, but it required more strength to crucify temper.

Half their troubles came from an imagination that ran amok. It was a great thing to have a pacified imagination.

The secret of a tranquilised imagination was giving it to Christ. The devil took away peace from them by getting hold of the imagination. Let them, then, give the imagination to Christ. When Jesus took them up He never let them down. His love never diminished and never finished.

The speaker, in closing, said the next thing Christ gave them was ability to bear anything.

Upon the ruin of their shattered self-sufficiency they rose to life and strength in Christ's all-sufficiency at all times. In themselves they were weak, but in Him they were strong.

THE AFTERNOON MEETING.

Under the chairmanship of Mr. H Stephens Richardson, D.L., the meeting for missionaries was held in the tent in the afternoon.

Mr. Herbert Dickson having offered prayer, the request of the committee that the givings should be allocated by the donors to the respective missions, was voiced by Mr. R. L. M'Keown, one of the honorary secretaries of the Convention.

The big audience was addressed by the following missionaries, all of whom presented the urgent need for more workers in the different fields—Mr. Herman Newark, Hebrew Christian Testimony to Israel; Mr. R. E. Thompson, China Inland Missionary; Miss Grills, Irish Presbyterian (Manchuria); Miss A. M. Ohlson, Church of England Zenana Mission; Mr. E. J. Ardill, Egypt General Mission; Mrs. Richmond, Soudan United Mission; Mr. D. H. O'Neill, Qua Iboe Mission; Dr. J. Nairn Hay, Inland S. American Missionary Union; Mr. G. R. Bennett, Irish Baptist Mission; and Mr. J. A. Stewart, Europe.

The missionaries home on furlough were introduced to the large and sympathetic audience.

Mr. G. F. Whitehead gave a brief address based on the 49th chapter of Isaiah, and Mr. Richardson asked for volunteers to serve in missionary lands, a request to which several responded.

The closing prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Boyd, Belfast.

Paying a compliment to the Salvation Army represented at the Convention during the week, Mr. H. Stephens Richardson, chairman, announced the opening hymn at the evening meeting to be "On, for a thousand tongues to sing my Great Redeemer's Praise." The very large assembly caught up at once this famous expression of worship, and gave a great and most reverential rendering.

Thanks to all who had helped to make the Convention a success, from the human standpoint, were then returned by the chairman. Those specially singled out for mention were Mr. R. G. Bass, Mr. Robertson, Mr. Henderson, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, and the Portstewart fishermen, who had erected the tent; the pianist, Mrs. Henderson, who had been with them from the start, and the members of the choir; also the Press.

Alluding to the attendance at the Convention, Mr. Richardson said there had been present more ministers than formerly. That was a healthy sign, showing good work would be done in many congregations. The incisive and clear cut addresses delivered by the Rev. Dr. Davidson, coming as they did from a scholar and a saint, were bound to make a great impression on the Ulster ministers. Then they had also that sweet singer, the Rev. Sidlow Baxter, who, in addition to being a preacher, was a skilful musician. He would in the name of that vast congregation ask Mr. Baxter to return to them in 1940. (Applause.)

MR. R. CLYDE AND FINANCES.

Mr. Robert Clyde, J.P., stated that when he spoke to them at a preceeding meeting the offerings were £7 down; that evening the offerings were £10 up. (Applause.) He had received several cheques running from £2 2s to 50 guineas. He wanted to thank the local committee for having provided the piano and money to paint the speaker's house.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Montgomery, the veteran Shankill Road Missioner, in his 91st year, now led the Convention in prayer, petitioning strongly for a general revival.

Mr. Whitehead gave a most arresting address based on a passage in the 7th Chapter of St. John's Gospel.

The source of life, of salvation and grace, he said, was pointed to by Christ as in Himself. The living waters were the Holy Spirit which Christ had promised before He ascended and was glorified. The living waters spoken of by Christ were to be released in floods. This was to be the result of the Cross of Calvary, which opened the door for God's wondrous grace to flow through to all mankind. That grace was free here and now, and available for all who wanted to receive and experience it from on High.

The next speaker was the Rev. Sidlow Baxter, who delivered the closing message. His job, he said, was not what the chairman had hinted, but it was exposition of the Scriptures. The Christian life, he had sought to show, was Christ possessed and Christ expressed. Christian experience was summed up in four words—transition, transfusion, transmission, and translation. Conversion was a transition from spiritual darkness to spiritual light. On transfusion he would say the life in each one of them was the life which was in Jesus Christ. How then ought they to love one another. The life of Christ gave them a wonderful cohesion and made the Church. The life of Christ was transfused into His people.

Christianity was never built on a coffin lid. It never adopted as its symbol the skull and cross bones. He borrowed a grave for only three days. That night He was a 1938 living reality, and though invisible, He was at the Portstewart Keswick.

Coming to transmission, Mr. Baxter said the service Jesus wanted from them was the transmission of His life to others. Dealing with translation, he stated that the fundamental purpose of their salvation was this. God had predestinated them that they might be conformed to the image of His Son. That was the greatest thing Heaven promised them.

DAY VICTORIA WAS CROWNED.

BELFAST HAS A LINK.

CENTENARY NEXT TUESDAY

THE LUTHER CHURCH, WHITEROCK.

A hundred years ago, the exact date being June 28, Queen Victoria was crowned. On the same day the foundation stone was laid of an interesting and historic little building in Belfast, the Luther Church, Whiterock. The centenary of both events will therefore fall on Tuesday next, and the latter will be celebrated by special services in the church. Services will also be held to-morrow.

The Luther Church was one of three Chapels of Ease or Houses of Prayer or combined District Churches and School Houses erected by Rev. Thos. Drew (who became Dr. Drew in 1842) in what was then the large, unwieldy Parochial District of Christ Church.

OTHER HOUSES OF PRAYER.

The other two Houses of Prayer were Wycliffe Chapel and Huss Chapel.

The foundation stone of Wycliffe Chapel, which occupied the site now filled by St. Matthew's Parochial Hall, Shankill Road, was laid on Easter Monday, April 16, 1838. The work of this chapel was so blessed that in the next year, 1839, it became the church of a new parochial district known as St. Matthew's.

Huss Chapel was at Bower's Hill, on the Shankill Road. The foundation stone of this building was also laid in 1838—on September 11. Huss Chapel was the germ from which has grown St. Mary's Parish. Thomas Drew planned a fourth House of Prayer, to be known as Cranmer Chapel. Ground was actually taken on the Falls Road but the scheme did not materialise.

Coronation Day, 1838, was a day long to be remembered in Belfast, especially by the parishioners of Christ Church. The day began with a short service in the church at 10-30, at which, it is recorded, every corner of the sacred edifice was occupied. After this service the congregation moved out to the back of the church, where the foundation stone of a new infant school (on part of the site now occupied by the Queen Victoria P.E. School) was laid by Dr. William Byrtt, a generous benefactor of his Church and one of that noble band of self-sacrificing laymen to whom the Church of Ireland in Belfast owes so much. Conspicuous in the large crowds standing round the foundation stone were the children of the parish day schools and Sunday schools. A large white flag floated over the scene, on one side of which was the inscription "Feed my Lambs" and on the other a representation of a crown and sceptre laid upon a Bible.

PROCESSION TO WHITEROCK.

This part of the proceedings being over, a great procession was formed to march to the site of the Luther Chapel, Whiterock. The procession was headed by the white flag, proudly carried on the occasion by Mr. Thomas Trelford. Five hundred senior school children came next. Parishioners and friends from far and near brought up the rear. It must have been a wonderful sight to see and hear the vast crowd, singing hymns and psalms, make its way along Barrack Street and the Falls Road and up the mountain side.

At the turnpike on the Falls Road there was a short interruption—a sudden summer shower, but the people of the neighbourhood welcomed the marchers into their homes. The rain disappeared as suddenly as it had arrived, the procession was re-formed, and soon it reached its destination, where the simple and impressive ceremony took place.

After the ceremony refreshments were distributed. The neighbouring farmers supplied milk for the children to drink, the Springfield Road district being then, as it is to-day, inhabited by many Belfast milk vendors.

Some time was then spent in sports and games of various kinds. At 5-30 o'clock the procession re-formed and marched back to Christ Church.

COMMEMORATIVE MEDALS.

On the following Sunday morning, July 1, each child who took part in the procession to Whiterock received a medal in commemoration of the Coronation and of the happy events which marked its observance among them.

The ground on which the Luther Church is built was presented by the late Mr. Hill Hamilton. When first erected the building had a tower and belfry but no bell. A bell was presented a few years later. In April, 1846, the end opposite to the tower—the ecclesiastical east—was neatly fitted up with a reading desk, chancel and pulpit. Two portable doors were at the same time placed outside the chancel railing, and these portable doors, together with the stationary doors at the sides of the reading-desk and pulpit, formed a complete screen across that portion of the building during the ordinary days of the week when school was being held. A few years ago the church was completely restored and renovated by the members of the congregation and their friends.

For four generations splendid work has been carried on in the Luther Church, very often by laymen. At the present time the church is worked in connection with St. Matthew's Parish, the rector of which is Rev. J. R. M'Donald, M.A. Whiterock district is growing. New houses are being built every year, and the little church, once situated in the midst of a thinly populated agricultural and pastoral district, now finds itself in a growing residental suburb of a modern city. One may prophesy a great future for this ancient House of Prayer and hope that the second 100 years in its history will be even more glorious than the 100 years now drawing to a close.

W. C. FIELDS ROYAL ATTRACTION.

RITZ ALPINE STORY.

JOAN CRAWFORD AT HIPPO.

CRUMLIN BOXING: CLASSIC ACTION.

W. C. Fields will be at the Royal Cinema next week. He will show how golf can best be played by using a motor scooter between the greens, and he opens up new vistas for the billiards enthusiast by showing how to diddle the marker. The picture is the big musical comedy, "The Big Broadcast of 1938," and the burden of the story is a Transatlantic race between two liners. Sheer knock out alternates with more serious moments in a riotous story.

RITZ THEATRE.

The Ritz is showing "Heidi," the Alpine story by Johanna Spyri, as first feature next week, with Shirley Temple starring along with Arthur Treacher, Helen Westley, and Jean Hersholt. The beauty of the story is fully brought out in the film, and the juvenile star reaches new heights. In support will be a crook drama called "Dangerously Yours," starring Cesar Romero and Phyllis Brooks. Joseph Seal at the organ as usual.

CRUMLIN PICTURE HOUSE.

A good boxing drama is due at the Crumlin Picture House on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in "Fifty Shilling Boxer," with Bruce Seton in the role of a circus clown who fancies the ring, and lands there to engage in a terrific combat for more than the actual stake. Leslie Fuller stars in "The Outcast," a rollicking comedy, at the week-end, and there will be the usual extras in the way of serial, comedy, and news items in each programme.

BELFAST HIPPODROME.

Joan Crawford's glamour is depicted to the full in "The Bride Wore Red," at the Hippodrome next week, a film in which she appears with her husband, Franchot Tone, and Robert Young contending for romantic honours, and Billie Burke and Reginald Owen spicing the feast with comedy. Miss Crawford is a cabaret entertainer, who becomes a grand lady for a month by chance of fate. The second feature, "The Black Doll," is a detective thriller, with Donald Woods and Nan Grey heading the cast.

CLASSIC CINEMA.

An exciting story of the inception of the Pony Express in America is told in "Wells Fargo," first feature at the Classic Cinema next week, with Joel M'Crea starring as the pioneer express man. The action covers the quarter century from the discovery of gold in California to the Civil War. Wendy Barrie and Kent Taylor head the cast in "A Girl with Ideas," a romantic newspaper drama, which supports, and there will be the usual extras, not forgetting the favourite Leslie Simpson at the organ.

At the Park on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday "Souls at Sea" will be followed on Thursday by "King Solomon's Mines" and "That's My Story."

THE BELFAST PLAYHOUSE.

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION.

The ingredients of a good production usually include a smattering of comedy interspersed by drama. In "The Cat and the Canary," next week's production at the Playhouse, Bedford Street, these ingredients, plus mystery and thrills, are ever present, the whole forming an enjoyable play. The author, John Willard, is a past master in writing plays that keep audiences in a flutter of excitement from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Just when those in front are entranced by a wooing love scene, the tables are turned and fits of laughter follow.

Thrills are also the order of the day, so that all tastes are catered for. "The Cat and the Canary" was an instantaneous success from the moment of its production at the National Theatre, New York.

The full cast of Playhouse favourites will appear in parts that are suited to their personalities, so an enjoyable evening is assured.

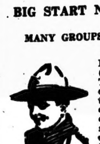

They were seated together on the sofa. He was staring vacantly in front of him. "Penny for your thoughts, darling," she suggested. He stirred himself. "I was just thinking of going," he replied. A voice came from the head of the stairs. "Give him a shilling, Sally," said her father. "It's worth it."

WITH BOY SCOUTS.

CAMPING SEASON OPENING.

BIG START NEXT WEEK.

MANY GROUPS NOW BUSY.

The departure from Belfast of the 69th (Royal Academy) Troop on Wednesday next will start the annual exodus of Boy Scouts from cities and towns to seaside or inland camping grounds. Scoutmaster J. J. Kane has obtained permission from the Rt. Hon. Lord Bangor for the 69th to spend a week under canvas at the beautiful Castleward demesne, near Strangford. The Academy boys' lead will be followed on Thursday by the 62nd (Rosetta) Cubs, who, under Cubmaster R. J. Craig, will camp at Cloughey, County Down, and on Friday the 74th (Royal Belfast Academical Institution) will leave for the Demesne, Castlewellan, under Scoutmaster Greer. The main body of troops and packs will, however, hold their summer camps during the Twelfth Week. Many have arranged to camp on sites in England, Scotland, and Wales. Amongst these troops are the 45th (St. George's), who will go to Bolton-le-Sands, near Morecambe; the 62nd (Rosetta) Troop to Balloch, Dumbarton; and the 42nd Belfast to Harplaw, Largs. The latter will have the Ballymacash Troop camping close by. Camps in Ulster will include the 40th (M'Cracken Memorial), also at Castleward; 55th (St. Nicholas) at Greyabbey; 25th (Y.M.C.A.) at Mourne Park, Kilkeel; and the 80th Cubs at Aghalee.

The terrible tragedy at Markham Colliery brought home to Scoutmaster Wm. Hollywood, M. of M. 37th Belfast Group, the suffering which follows such disasters. He and his boys ran a Midnight Revue in aid in the Albertbridge Orange Hall, and up to the present £30 has been raised. The Group deserved the warm appreciation expressed by the Lord Mayor, Sir Crawford M'Cullagh, Bart.

EAST BELFAST SPORTS.

The East Belfast District Sports on Wednesday evening were a big success. Assistant District Commissioner Thos. M'Mullan is to be congratulated on his organisation and management of the sports, which embraced entries from almost all the 22 Groups in the district. Outstanding competitors were G. Mills (26th), and C. Spence (22nd). The 10th and 22nd, with 24 points each, tied for first place, and thus share the Sir Dawson Bates Cup. 26th were runners-up with 19 points, and next were 37th and 19th. The joint champions will receive pennants, as also will the runners-up. Awards will probably be handed over at the gathering after the District Relay Race. Amongst those present were Mr. Arthur Black, K.C.; Mr. H. E. Keown, District Commissioner J. H. Norritt, and Major J. M. Henderson, chairman of East Belfast Association.

Scouts and Cubs of the 46th Belfast (Carlisle Memorial), 34th (North Belfast Mission), 13th (University Road), 24th (Knock Methodist), and the 63rd (Ligoniel Methodist) took part in last Sunday's Methodist Conference Young People's Rally in the Grosvenor Hall. Group Scoutmaster A. A. M'Gladdery (46th), who had charge of the Troops and Packs on parade, was assisted by Acting Scoutmasters R. C. Jefferson (46th), A. Crozier (34th), C. E. Handforth, and by Cubmasters Miss M'Cormick, C. Sanders, and T. Gamble.

The victims of recent accidents (one a road crash and the other at work), Rover Scout Dick Wolsey, 32nd Belfast, and Scout Jack Scovell, 54th Belfast, are now making excellent progress in the Royal Victoria Hospital. The cheery way in which both lads take their troubles is most marked.

The British contingent to Sweden which leaves London on July 26 and returns on August 12, will have representatives from different parts of the Empire, and will include equal proportions of public school boys and boys at business. Ulster will be represented by a number of Scouts under the charge of Commissioner J. H. Britton. There are three vacancies in the Belfast party, and applications for these places should be made immediately to Ulster Scout Headquarters.

His many friends in Belfast will be glad to learn that Scoutmaster N. J. S. Thompson has arrived home from India on a three months' vacation. Mr. Thompson was an enthusiastic Scouter in the 53rd Group and an active member of the Carlisle Memorial Crew before a business appointment took him to India. He was only a short time in that country when he formed a Scout Troop of native boys.

North Belfast Wolf Cubs had their annual service in St. James's Parish Church last Sunday afternoon. Rev. H. A. M'Kegney, Assistant County Commissioner for Londonderry, was the preacher. The collection was on behalf of the Children's Hospital, Falls Road.

WILLOWFIELD REUNION.

On Friday night, in the Headquarters of the 26th Group, at Willowfield (Gibson Park Hall), the 26th Rover Scouts assembled for the final reunion of the season. During the proceedings opportunity was taken to present Assistant Rover Leader William Bennett with his warrant, this being handed over by A.D.C. R. R. Clark. Rover Leader J. H. Healy was in charge of the arrangements and of the parade. A feature of the gathering was a social in honour of Mr. R. J. MacKenzie, late Rover Leader of the 26th, to whom a gift was handed on the occasion of his marriage. District Commissioner J. H. Norritt referred to the long and happy connection with the Crew which Mr. MacKenzie enjoyed, and assured him of the good wishes of every Rover. Mr. MacKenzie replied. Congratulatory speeches were made by the chairman (Rover Leader Healy), Rover Mate S. White, and others. Songs were given by A.D.C. Clark and Rover S. Lunn.

It is gratifying to learn of the good work being done by the Rovers of the 35th Group, in preparing their new Rover Den. The formal opening of this new room will be looked forward to.

In the 43rd (Beersbridge Road) Group Scoutmaster J. K. Noble is still going strong, and it is understood that the 83rd Group (Rovers) will amalgamate with them and so strengthen the 43rd.

BELFAST CHORAL UNION.

At the Glasgow Musical Festival the Belfast Choral Union Mixed Voice Choir, Belfast, was awarded second place in the Premier Class. Eight choirs competed and the Choral Union was only one mark below the winners. The adjudicator was Sir Hugh Roberton, conductor of the Glasgow Orpheus Choir.

"HOODED MEN" RELEASED

PARIS, Friday.—The Grand Jury sitting this afternoon decided to release provisionally General Duseigneur, one of the alleged leaders of the Cagoulards (hooded men) organisation, which was accused last year of having plotted against the security of the State.

General Duseigneur, who had been detained at the Sante Prison since November, 1937, was released this evening following the decision of the Court.

M. Jean de Vouville-Maillefeu, who was secretary-general of the organisation was also released provisionally pending his trial.—Exchange.

U.S. EDUCATIONISTS IN BELFAST.

BUT DON'T MAKE LONG STAY.

GIVING SEVERAL DAYS TO DUBLIN.

"Belfast seems to be a delightful city. I wish we could stay a little longer and see more of it," said Professor F. W. Peterson, distinguished American educationist, to a "Telegraph" reporter shortly after his arrival from Londonderry on Friday evening.

Professor Peterson, head of the English Department of Michigan University, is leading a party of nine Americans who are making a tour of Ireland for the purpose of studying national, political, social, economic and educational conditions, but so far they have been impressed most with the scenery.

"Your Irish countryside—incomparable," was the professor's verdict. "Yes, it's a great pity that our programme doesn't permit us to give more than a day to Belfast. We leave to-morrow for Dublin, where we stay until Tuesday, and then we return to London, where we break up—some to visit the Continental countries, others to tour England and Scotland."

Professor Peterson, who is an authority on Scandinavia, is joining another party of American tourists in London for a trip to the Land of the Midnight Sun; otherwise he declares he would extend his stay in Ireland in order to see more of Irish people and Irish ways.

"You accuse us Americans of spending our lives 'hustling,'" he remarked, "but I've never really 'hustled' until I came to Ireland. It's been one big 'hustle' ever since we stepped off the boat, but I guess I've enjoyed every minute of it. Americans, you see, are inclined to imagine that Ireland being a small country it requires a comparatively small part of the European itinerary, but what a mistake that is. The difficulty is that there's too much to see, and very little time to see it in. Still, it's surprising how much the average American can see in the time at his disposal, and I can assure you that the Americans in this party are going to see just as much as is humanly possible of your lovely city before they travel on. Yes, sir!

"And," he added briskly, "we're starting right now. Perhaps you could suggest something for the evening? The Art Gallery and Museum? Splendid! Queen's University? Better still! No, don't worry; we'll have no trouble finding our way. Trust an American to do that. Ha! ha!"

To-day the party visited the City Hall and the Houses of Parliament.

The tour is one of many arranged by the Bureau of University Travel, Newton, Mass., and each of its members represents a different State. They include university graduates, high school teachers, and a Cuban businessman.

WEEK OF RECOVERY IN STOCK MARKETS

RETURNING CONFIDENCE

PRICES MOVE UP ALL ROUND

WALL STREET VERY HELPFUL

LONDON, Friday Night.—Signs of returning confidence were strongly in evidence in the "House" during the past week. Sentiment was favourably affected by the marked success which attended the issue of the new Defence Loan and the most encouraging advices received from Wall Street, and these favourable factors, coupled with the prospect of more settled conditions in the international sphere, resulting from the efforts to secure a truce in the Spanish War, had an invigorating effect on the City. The turnover showed improvement, members were busier than for some time past, and there was a general move up in values in nearly all sections.

British Funds were quieter as attention was directed to other groups, but the new Defence 3 per cent. Bonds jumped up to 1 1-16 premium, whilst War Loan 3½ per cent. hardened slightly to 101 13-16.

Home Railway stocks earlier tempted buyers, and showed firmness, but following the traffic returns for the past week, which registered in the totals a further fall of £156,000, compared with a year ago, conditions became quieter.

FOREIGN BONDS.

The improved outlook for international politics was reflected in Central European Bonds, whilst Brazilians improved on a semi-official statement that Brazil would be in a position to resume the debt service within a comparatively short time.

Chinese Bonds made a good showing, helped by further consideration of the July coupon payments.

Among overseas rails, Sao Paulos (Brazil) were dull. International reflected the strong upward trend on Wall Street.

INDUSTRIALS' RISE.

Home industrial movements generally favoured holders, with iron and steel shares a strong feature, whilst the leading issues advanced appreciably.

Courtaulds were a good market, following the May Rayon production figures, which showed a rise of over 1,000,000lbs. on May, 1937.

Cables stocks were unaffected by the index figures for the month of May at 65.3, which is 6.2 lower than that for April. This is the lowest monthly figure since July, 1932 and the lowest May figure ever recorded.

The May index now announced is the first for a full month since the recent introduction of greatly reduced rates for messages.

The drop in the index of traffic receipts is, therefore, in part at least, a reflection of the lower charges; but the shrinkage in international trade has also for some time been adversely affecting the company's traffics.

Patons & Baldwins were firm, despite the fall in profits.

MINING FEATURE.

The outstanding feature in the Mining share market was the decline in the shares of De Beers Consolidated Mines, following the news from the directors stating that owing to the depressed condition in the diamond market, and in order to conserve the company's cash resources had decided to defer the declaration of a dividend on the Preference shares for the time being. At one time the Preference shares were marked down to 10, and the Deferred to 7⅛.

Gold shares attracted a fair amount of activity on both Cape and Home support, although in many instances subsequent profit-taking turned gains into small declines. The price of gold fluctuated narrowly.

TIN SHARES.

Tin shares responded to the improvement in the price of the metal to £188 17s 6d per ton, a rise of £9 5s on the week, following the news that the International Tin Committee at their meeting in London fixed the quota under the tin control agreement for the quarter beginning July 1 at 35 per cent. of standard tonnages, augmented in the case of Malaya and Dutch East Indies by 7½ per cent.

The committee discussed the settled and revised draft of the buffer stock scheme. The scheme was finally agreed upon was signed by all the delegations present and showed no material variations as compared with the original draft.

The committee fixed as the contribution in the buffer stock for the quarter commencing July 1 a quota of 10 per cent. of standard tonnages, modified for Malaya and Dutch East Indies as mentioned above.

The next meeting will be held at The Hague on Wednesday, September 14.

COPPER SHARES.

Copper shares were in the ascendant, stimulated by the firmness of Wall Street, which was reflected in the improvement in the price of the metal. Rhodesians were active and firm.

Elsewhere Van Emden actively dealt in and encountered a good speculative demand with the result that the shares changed hands freely and were quoted appreciably higher.

Silver shares also moved in holders' favour, notably San Francisco, following the advance in the price of the metal.

RUBBERS' STRENGTH.

The increasing trade demand in America has had a beneficial influence in the Rubber share market, where the leading favourites, such as Anglo-Dutch, Rubber Trust, and United Sua Betong developed marked strength, while the price of the raw material recorded a gain of ⅜d at 6 23-32d per lb

Oil shares experienced a very good demand, and prices generally displayed firmness.

KWAHU GOLDS.

It is rumoured in the market that a determined effort is to be made to put the shares of the Kwahu Mining Co. (1925), Ltd., higher. The company is a West African finance and mining trust, and it is interested in Marlu and Gold Coast Main Reef Companies, while many mining leases are held. The capital of the company is £40,000 in 2s shares, quoted at over £2, so the market value is £825,000. This is not a huge valuation, and it may not be difficult to manœuvre the shares higher, as the chief blocks are in the hands of insiders. In 1935 they attained a price of 86s 3d, since when they gradually declined to a lowest of 23s 6d last year. Should Kwahus realise the anticipations of insiders, other West Africans should be sympathetically affected.

ASSESSING AIRCRAFT SHARES.

When the report of the Blackburn Aircraft, Ltd., is available it will prove instructive. From the preliminary figures it earned £137,957 for the year to March 31, as compared with £120,480 for the previous twelve months, which was the first period. The dividend is to be 15 per cent. as against 12½ per cent.

Profits accruing in this industry are in no way so substantial as had been generally hoped. The report will be awaited with more than ordinary interest, as it may give some idea as to what may be expected of other companies. It does not seem that they have benefited to a great extent.

Should the report throw some additional light on working conditions in the industry it will prove an aid to assessing the values of other shares in this section. No one could, however, dissuade investors from purchasing aircraft shares, for the Government orders must bring increased grist to the mill.

JOHN BROWN & CO., LTD.

Lord Aberconway, chairman, presiding at the annual meeting of John Brown Ltd., in London, said the shipyard at Clydebank was likely to be fully employed for some considerable time The improvement in the coal trade was continued during the current year. During the last few months there had been a certain falling off in industrial demand. The Government was at present making a heavy demand upon the more specialised manufacturing resources of the country, and it was not to be expected that private investments in capital goods would continue on a high scale during a period of intensified Government expenditure. Should the international outlook improve, he anticipated an increase in trade demand.

LANCEGAYE PROFITS SLUMP.

Profits of Lancegaye Safety Glass (1934) for the year to March 31 last amounted to £16,269 against £46,067, and £3,219 against £411 was brought in. Taxation reserve receives £1,000 (nil), and a final dividend of 3 per cent. makes 10 per cent. for the year, leaving £2,065 to go forward. For the previous year £6,000 was placed to general reserve, £1,500 to employes' welfare fund, £1,000 to investment reserve, and £2,000 to bad debts reserve, while dividends totalled 20 per cent. and a bonus of 4 per cent. was distributed.

BREWERY DEBENTURE REDEMPTION.

The directors of Strong and Co., of Romsey, have given notice of their intention to redeem on January 2, 1939, at 103 per cent. the whole outstanding amount of 6 per cent. Mortgage Debenture Stock. The company has also two issues fo 4 per cent. Debenture Stock in issue, and which are quoted around 107.

TEA PROFITS MAINTAINED.

Remarkably little variation is disclosed in the results reprteod by the directors of Brooke, Bond and Co. The £138,398 for preceding year, but £126,367 as against £96,969 was brought in. The final dividend is 5 per cent., making again 10 per cent. for year, the allocation ot general reserve is again £50,000, and £155,964 is carried forward. Obviously the company is in a very strong position btoh from the point of view of trade and finance.

ONE OF THE OLD RUBBER BRIGADE.

The Bukit Rajah is one of the oldest plantation rubber companies, and the directors' report, now forthcoming in respect of the year ended March 31 last, makes a fairly satisfactory showing, though the net profit of £18,846 is over £2,000 below the previous year's figure of £20,947. On the other hand £5,398 as against £2,844 was brought in. The dividend is maintained at 5 per cent. and £7,569 is carried forward. The company has a contract to supply 120 tons of rubber in 1938 at 10⅝d per lb. c.i.f. in equal quantities of 10 tons per month.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE PICTURE.

There is another side to the picture in the plantation rubber industry, some of the weaker companies having got into financial straits. Thus the Banir Rubber Estates finds it necessary to bring forward a capital reconstruction scheme involving a reduction of the capital from £150,000 to £87,000 by writing 10s per share off the £1 shares. The reduced 10s shares are then to be subdivided into shares of 2s each.

FALL IN COMMODITIES RESULT.

The directors of D.W.A. Plantations have to give notice that, owing to the very serious fall in the price of sisal, it will not be possible to pay a dividend on the Preference shares for the six months to June 30, 1938.

The directors of Meesons Limited, multiple confectioners, with a factory in Manchester and a large number of retail branches in England and Wales, have deferred payment of dividend on 5½ per cent. redeemable Cumulative Preference shares for the half-year ending the 30th inst. until the result of the year's trading is available.

DONEGAL MAN'S TRAGIC DEATH.

Dr. J. P. M'Ginley, Coroner, on Thursday held an inquest at Drumaroa, Churchill, on an elderly man named Manus M'Laughlin, of Drumarva, who was found dead in his home.

Timothy Gallagher gave evidence that he was a cousin of the deceased, who was a small farmer and was unmarried, and aged about 70 years. He had been in receipt of a blind pension for some years and lived alone. Witness found him lying dead in front of the fire. The face appeared to be scorched.

The verdict was that the cause of death was syncope.

GLENTIES DISTRICT COURT.

At Glenties District Court on Thursday, before District Justice O'Hanrahan, The Erne Motor & Cycle Co., Ltd., 17 Lower Baggot Street, Dublin, were plaintiffs in a civil bill against Con P. Melley, Tullycleave, Ardara; Nora Melley, spinster, and Jas. Melley, both of Ardara, formerly trading as Melley & Co., cycle dealers, claiming £5 0s 6d balance alleged to be due for bicycles sold and delivered by the plaintiffs to the defendants.

Mr. Louis Walsh appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. J. H. Barry (Messrs. Dunley & Barry) for Con P. Melley.

The Justice gave a decree for the full amount against Nora and James Melley and struck out the case against Con P. Melley.

Ellen Doherty, Meenasona, summoned Mary Doherty, sen., and her two daughters, Fanny and Mary Doherty, Coolway, for assaults.

The District Justice sentenced Mary Doherty, sen., to one month's imprisonment with hard labour, the sentence not to be enforced if she does not interfere with the complainant for two years, and adjourned the summonses against the other defendants for the same period.

CRUISER MURDER CHARGE.

SAILOR'S ACQUITTAL

GREETED WITH CHEERING.

DORSETSHIRE SHOOTING AFFAIR.

HONG KONG, Friday.—Pandemonium and a great burst of cheering broke out when Ordinary Seaman Edwin Dwyer, 19-year-old former public schoolboy from Weston-super-Mare, was found not guilty here to-day on a charge of murdering Leading Seaman Robert Edmund Dickinson, and was acquitted.

Dwyer was alleged to have shot Dickinson through the head on board the cruiser Dorsetshire when it was in Australian waters in May.

The charge of murder was said to be the first relating to a death on a British warship for a century.

Many European women went to the court to see the former public schoolboy in dock.

Standing to attention Dwyer answered firmly, "Not guilty, my Lord," when charged.

During earlier proceedings in the Magistrates' Court the prosecution alleged that the crime was the sequel to Dickinson's discovery of an offence alleged to have been committed by Dwyer.

Counsel for the prosecution stated that during investigations into Dickinson's death Dwyer steadfastly denied having committed the crime.

The trial of Dwyer had a sudden ending to-day following a brilliant plea by his Portuguese counsel, Senhor Leo Dalmada.

Senhor Dalmada emphasised the circumstantial nature of all the evidence and the fact that any one of the 150 men had an equal opportunity to murder Dickinson.

Acting Chief Justice Lindsell's summing up took two hours, after which the jury retired to consider their verdict. They were out for 40 minutes.

The verdict was greeted with wild applause from sailors, who were crowded into the courtroom.

Dwyer, who remained perfectly calm throughout the trial, went over to shake his counsel's hand.—Reuter.

BELFAST MAN'S POOLS EXPERIMENT.

TWO-POSTMARKS LETTER.

WITNESSES FROM LIVERPOOL.

A Belfastman was arrested on Friday on a charge of attempting to obtain about £7,000 from Messrs. Vernons Pools Ltd., Liverpool, and later appeared at the Belfast Custody Court, before Mr. J. H. Campbell, R.M.

The accused, James Steele M'Cormick, described as a baker, of Hesketh Park, was arrested by Sergeant W. A. Boyd, and when cautioned was alleged to have said—"I wrote and told Messrs. Vernons what I had done. It was more in the nature of an experiment. I then forgot all about it until interviewed."

The charge against M'Cormick was that on April 9, with intent to defraud, he attempted to obtain from Vernons Pools Ltd. about £7,000 by false pretences, namely, by pretending that an envelope containing a coupon on which were forecast the results of football matches to be played on that day were posted on or before 4-45 p.m. on April 8.

Winifred J. Humphreys, a clerk in the employment of Vernons Pools, said it was her duty to deal with late post mail. On Monday, April 11, she received the envelope produced which contained a coupon and a postal order. Both coupon and letter bore the name and address, "James M'Cormick, 92 Hesketh Park, Belfast," with the addition on the coupon of the words "Co. Antrim."

Charles H. Reilly, an investigation clerk employed by Vernons, said he inspected the letter and found that it bore two postmarks On the front was "Belfast, 4-45 p.m., 8th April, 1938," and on the back was "Belfast, 8 p.m., 9th April, 1938." He referred the matter to the Investigation Branch of the Post Office. The total amount of the investments was 1s 6d. In the penny points pool were shown three winning lines—one with 26 points, one 25 points, and one 24 points. Had the forecasts been genuine M'Cormick would have won a total amount of about £7,000. No person sent in a genuine forecast with 26 points, and the pool was accordingly divided between those with 25 points each. The postal order was in payment of investments made by the accused the previous week.

Accused was remanded until Tuesday, bail being fixed at £50 and two sureties of £25 each, or one of £50.

ANGLICAN CHURCH AND ROME.

PRIMATE AND DISCUSSION.

EXPRESSES REGRET.

When the English Church Assembly meeting in London debated the report of the Church of England Council on Foreign Relations, Mr. L. G. Fisher, of Beckenham, raised the question of reunion with Rome.

"We see that people are tolerated in the Church of England who deny the Virgin birth and the existence of angels and devils," he said. "Is there any wonder that our minds are turned to the great Roman Church, where these great doctrines have been resolutely defended?"

Mr. W. A. Poynter Adams, of Bodmin, called attention to a report that 1,016 clergymen had subscribed to the faith of the Council of Trent and pledged themselves to preach it to their parishioners.

Mr. Adams moved a resolution inviting the Archbishops and Bishops to make a public statement of their policy on the matter.

Dealing with the statement that 1,016 clergymen subscribed to the faith on the Council of Trent and were pledged to preach it, the Archbishop of Canterbury said: "There is no foundation for the statement."

The Archbishop regretted the discussion, and pointed out that it had been reported that there were only 335 clergy who accepted the dogmatic position of the English Church Unity Octave Council.

"Our brethren of the Orthodox Churches and the Protestant Churches overseas," he said, "may dismiss from their minds the idea that these 335 represent a considerable and serious movement on the part of the Church of England for a return to obedience to the Papacy."

SEARCH FOR LUTINE GOLD.

TERSCHELLING (Holland), Saturday.—A quantity of round shot and copper plates brought to the surface by the giant dredger Karimata is regarded here as indicating that the dredger is very close to the wreck of the Lutine, if not actually above it.

The dredger is attempting to recover the Lutine's £2,000,000 treasure.

The dredgers expect that gold will soon appear in the sieves through which the dredged sand is passed.

A copper mastclamp about a foot long has also been recovered. It bears a tripod, the 18th century emblem of the British Navy, and is regarded as further proof that the Karimata is operating close to the wreck.—Reuter.

SURPRISE FOR SOLICITOR.

EGLINTON EJECTMENT SUIT.

At Eglinton Petty Sessions on Friday Sarah O'Hara brought an ejectment summons against Samuel Harper and Elizabeth Harper in respect of premises at Gortgar Beg, Greysteel.

Complainant (for whom Mr. P. Maxwell appeared) said defendants became tenants in January, 1937 at 3s a week and rates. The rent had not been paid since March, 1937. She had paid the rates as against a contra account for work done for her by Samuel Harper.

Mr. W. J. G. Seeds, for defendants, asked for a dismiss on the grounds that the first rent had been paid on a Thursday and the notice to quit gave Saturday.

Mr. Maxwell—I am taken by surprise, but Saturday is the last day of the week and this was a weekly tenancy.

Mr. Seeds said the notice to quit must end on a "gale day."

Mr. Maxwell—Apparently this man has no gale day at all. (Laughter.)

Mr. Seeds—There is a complicated matter of accounts between the parties.

Captain Bell, R.M., suggested that the case should be settled, and with this object in view the summons was adjourned.

PRESIDENT OF EIRE.

INSTALLATION OF DR. DOUGLAS HYDE.

THE RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

ATTENDS AT ST. PATRICK'S.

Dublin was gay with bunting and flags to-day for the inauguration of the first President of Eire. This morning, preparatory to the inaugural ceremony, services were held in the principal churches of the city. The Prime Minister, Mr. De Valera, with members of his Cabinet and members of the Dail and Senate, attended a special Votive Mass in the Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral.

Dr. Douglas Hyde attended the special service at St. Patrick's Cathedral, where there was a large congregation for the occasion, which included representatives of the Government, both Houses of the Legislature, the judiciary, Dublin University, Dublin Corporation, members of the Diplomatic Corps, and the professions.

Dr. Hyde was received at the Cathedral gate by Mr. F. W. Price, K.C., and Mr. Gerald Grove-White, on behalf of the Cathedral Board, on his arrival, and met at the door by the Archbishop, Most Rev. Dr. Gregg, and the Dean, Very Rev. D. F. R. Wilson.

The procession, which included the Bishop of Killaloe, Rt. Rev. Dr. Paton, then went to the choir, where Dr. Hyde, escorted by the Archbishop and the Dean, was shown into the former Viceregal pew. The service was taken by the Dean, the Lesson being head by the Precentor, Rev. Canon W. E. Drury.

Following the Te Deum, the final prayers for Ireland, for the President, and for Christian citizenship, were intoned by the Dean. The following is the special prayer recited for the President:—"Almighty God, our creator and preservor, who ordereth all things, and to whom all hearts are subject, we humbly beseech Thee to give Thy Grace and guidance to Thy servant, Douglas Hyde, our President, for new responsibilities undertaken in Thy name. Grant him strength, wisdom and courage, so that in the love of his people and in perfect trust of Thee he may be found a faithful steward of Thy good and perfect gift, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

The Archbishop then gave the blessing and the choir led the procession to the west door, where the President was seen off by the Archbishop, the Dean, and the Bishop of Killaloe

DEATH OF MR. M. H. KIRKE

FOLLOWING MOTOR CRASH.

SECRETARY TO HOME MINISTER.

We deeply regret to announce that Mr. M. H. Kirke, B.A., LL.B., private secretary to the Minister of Home Affairs (Sir Dawson Bates) died early this afternoon at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

Mr. Kirke was injured when his car collided with a lamp standard on the Malone Road at 2 a.m. on Friday. He was quickly conveyed to hospital, where on examination he was found to have sustained a fracture of the skull.

The late Mr. Kirke had been private secretary to the Home Minister since 1933. He was born in the Federated Malay States on September 17, 1898. After the death of his father, who was a native of Portrush, he took up residence in Ulster and was educated at the Coleraine Academical Institution. Later he went to Trinity College, Dublin, were he took B.A., and LL.B., degrees, and also won a moderatorship in history and in legal and political science.

In 1921 he was appointed an assistant master at Coleraine Academical Institution and from 1922 till 1923 he was a master in King's Hospital School, Dublin. He then became an Assistant-Principal in the Ministry of Home Affairs and served in various departments in the Ministry until 1933 when he was appointed private secretary to the Minister.

He is survived by his wife, who is a daughter o fthe late Professor Symmers.

MALAYAN MAN HUNT STARTS.

MURDER OF MINE MANAGER.

ROBBERS' £1,250 LOOT.

KUALA LUMER (F.M.S.), Saturday.—Police from all parts of Northern British Malay joined in a man-hunt at dawn to-day for the murderers of Mr. F. G. W. Dunford, manager of the Tersang gold mine, near Raub, in Pehang, one of the biggest and wildest Malay States.

Mr. Dunford was killed in his own bungalow late last night by Chinese gangsters armed with a shotgun and parangs (Malay knives) whose identity is at present unknown.

Their motive was robbery. They escaped into the jungle carrying 10,000 dollars (about £1,250) worth of gold and amalgam—an alloy in which one of the metals is mercury—which they took from a safe.

The murder follows a savege attack with a similar motive on the acting manager of Raub Australian Mining Company, Mr. F. N. Betheras, at Raub on Thursday night.

Mr. Betheras had one of his ears nearly sliced off while struggling with a lone intruder, a Chinese, whom he discovered attempting to break open the company's safe. His assailant was shot dead on the spot.—Reuter.

MR. ERNEST BEVIN IN DERRY

HIS REFERENCE TO PENSIONS.

A meeting of the Amalgamated Transport and General Workers' Union in Derry Guildhall on Friday evening was addressed by Mr. Ernest Bevin, General Secretary, who said practically every social service they enjoyed had its origin in the trades' union branches. They were now out to improve workmen's compensation and to secure pensions of £1 for single persons, and joint pensions of 35s for married couples, the age for women to be 55.

"When the so called boom is over," he said, "this scheme will be vital. It will release 540,000 people from industry. Allow the younger people who should be working to get into industry." He appealed to the members to urge the Northern Government to pass any legislation adopted by the British Parliament for social reform.

There was no need always to be fighting by strikes for these things, he said, in appealing for agitation through Parliament.

Mr. Bevin said it was a revolution to see the House of Lords vote for the nationalisation of mines, and he predicted that the time would come when everything above the surface of the earth would be nationalised also.

Mr. A. Deakin, Assistant General Secretary of the Union, also spoke.

Mr. S. Kyle, Belfast, presided.

Mr. Bevin, who is 58, is going abroad for a health tour shortly.

DANCE AT GLENARM.

The annual dance under the auspices of Glenarm R.B.P., 377 was held on Friday night in the Orange Hall, Glenarm. Br. James M'Hendry officiated as M.C. and Glenarm Dance Band supplied the music.

POISONED FARMER.

QUESTIONS ABOUT TIN OF SALTS.

POSITION ON SIDEBOARD.

MAY BE VERY IMPORTANT.

Questions about the position of the tin of salts on the sideboard on the morning of the death of Mr. William Murfitt, the wealthy Risby (Suffolk) farmer, from cyanide poisoning, were asked by the Coroner at the resumed inquest to-day at Risby.

The Coroner said that the position of the tin might be of considerable importance.

Miss Beatrice May Cutmore, for five years cook employed by Mrs. Murfitt, said that after dusting the sideboard she was certain she replaced the tin on the right of the sideboard.

Mr. Murfitt collapsed and died at breakfast on May 17 after drinking his salts.

On Friday Dr. Roche Lynch, the Home Office analyst, expressed the view that cyanide from which Mr. Murfitt died was placed in the tin of salts on the morning of his death and within a few hours of his taking the fatal drink.

Mrs. Gertrude Murfitt, the widow, was on Friday questioned about her husband and other women. She said that there was no woman of whom she was jealous.

Miss Cutmore, giving evidence, to-day said that Mr. and Mrs. Murfitt were on very good terms.

After the Coroner, Mr. T. Wilson, had questioned Miss Cutmore about the position of the salts on the sideboard, he asked: "Can you remember any previous occasion when it has been in the position that you found it that morning?"

Miss Cutmore—Never. I have always found it on the left side.

Shown three bottles, brown, white, and green, marked "poison," Miss Cutmore said that she had never seen them before. No stranger or person who was not an inhabitant of Quays Farm, where the Murfitts lived, went into the dining room on the 16th or the 17th, to her knowledge.

Miss Cutmore said that after Mr. Murfitt had collapsed Mrs. Murfitt was very upset.

During further evidence, witness mentioned that she (Miss Cutmore) was ill on February 13 and the Coroner remarked to the jury: "You will remember that was the time when Mrs. Murfitt said she had supplied Mrs. Chandler (a friend of the Murfitts mentioned in evidence yesterday), with ingredients for a cake."

William Roger Murfitt, younger son of the dead man, in the witness box, said that three and a half years ago he left home owing to a difference of opinion with his father. He came back after about six months and lived at the farm until about six weeks ago when he went to sea. He was at sea when his father died.

Witness said that the "tow" between his father and mother about Mrs. Browne (a friend of the family) was settled amicably. The incident was about 18 months ago and his father ceased his association with Mrs. Browne. He and his father had "a difference of opinion" on the subject.

Evidence was given by Mr. Murfitt's elder son, Joseph Leslie Murfitt, who said that he last saw his father at the farm about a fortnight before his death.

Witnses handed the Coroner a balance sheet showing that over the year ended May 31 there was a balance of assets over liabilities of roughly £11,000.

He thought the difference between his father and mother of 18 months ago was "completely forgotten and forgiven."

DERRY ROAD MISHAP

EGLINTON COURT SEQUEL.

DANGEROUS DRIVING FINE.

William Kyle, Ballyreagh, Portrush, was prosecuted at Eglinton Petty Sessions on Friday for driving a motor-car recklessly on May 23, and for being under the influence of drink or drugs to such an extent as, to be incapable of having proper control of the car.

Mr. A. L. M'Clelland, who defended, said he was prepared to plead guilty to the reckless driving charge, and suggested that the other case, which was a border line one, should be withdrawn.

Head-Constable Healy said he could not take the responsibility of withdrawing the other case.

Dr. A. H. Montgomery, Eglinton said when he examined the defendant at the barracks at 10-45 p.m. he came to the conclusion he had some drink taken, but found it difficult to make up his mind whether he was fit to drive a car. Defendant was not too bad, and it was definitely a border line case. There was also a suspicion of carbon monoxide, and on testing the defendant's car he found traces of carbon monoxide, and that there was something wrong with the exhaust.

Captain Bell, R.M.—What effect has carbon monoxide?

Dr. Montgomery replied that it had much the same effect as alcohol.

Head-Constable Healy stated that the defendant was driving on the main Derry-Limavady Road, and it was alleged that he swerved and came into collision with another car.

Constable M'Connell said when he saw Kyle after the accident he thought he was drunk, and he did not think he was in a condition to drive a car.

Replying to Mr. M'Clelland, the constable said defendant answered all questions in an intelligent manner.

The R.M.—Was anyone hurt?

Mr. M'Clelland—No.

Constable Mairs said defendant was not too bad, but seemed to have drink taken.

Ronald Nixon, Clooney Terrace, Derry, said he was motoring towards Derry when the defendant's car, coming in the opposite direction, swerved to the right. Witness also swerved, and Mr. Kyle's car struck his a slight blow.

Defendant said the only drink he had that day was a glass of orange gin in Derry. When he saw the other car he thought the driver intended to turn up a side road. He explained that his exhaust pipe had got broken and monoxide fumes were getting into the car, the windows of which were closed owing to rain.

Captain Bell dismissed the drunk in charge case, which he said the police were justified in bringing

In the other case defendant, who, it was stated, had been driving for 16 years without conviction, was fined 40s for driving in a manner dangerous to the public.

INDIANS IN DONEGAL COURT

LETTERKENNY CASE DISMISSED.

At a special court in Letterkenny on Thursday evening, before District-Justice Walsh.

Superintendent T. Kelly, G.S., charged a young Indian clothes dealer, Destray Ray Varna, of Church Lane, Letterkenny, with stealing eight ladies' silk dresses value £1 16s from another young Indian, Rahmat Ali, Letterkenny, on June 22.

Judging by the crowded court, keen interest was taken in the case. Two other Indians were also present, and great difficulty was occasioned through the evidence being given in broken English.

Defendant at the outset told the Justice he could not get bail. He did not mind being tried there, but he objected to Rahmat Ali giving his evidence on oath.

When Rahmat Ali entered the witness-box the Justice asked him how he took the oath? Like any other man—on the Bible. (Laughter.)

Defendant (loudly)—I have an objection I am a Hindoo and the witness is a Mohammedan. He does not believe in God as he would not go and kneel in the chapel.

Rahmat Ali—I believe in God.

After being sworn in the usual way, witness gave evidence.

The Justice said it would not be safe to convict the accused on the uncorroborated evidence of complainant, especially as he had admitted in his evidence that he did not know how many dresses he had in his bags. He dismissed the case on its merits.

YOUR SECURITY

ONE IS FACED with the choice of a funeral director so infrequently, that when death occurs, it is difficult to make a decision. Many considerations should guide you at such a time. Is the funeral director you select experienced? Is his staff well trained? Does he guarantee a service worth its cost? Has he the facilities, the funeral home and equipment, that will insure a dignified burial for your loved one? Is he absolutely dependable, living up to the rigid ethical code of his profession?

We ask that you check our service against these and other important questions. You will find that this organisation meets every requirement.
